WOMAN SUFFRAGE MEASURE KILLED.

Comes Up in House of Commons for Second Reading.

Premier Announced Intention of Voting for Bill.

LONDON, March 8.—The woman's enfranchisement bill," which came up for its second reading in the House of Commons today, and which was introduced by Mr. Dickinson, Liberal, although practically identical with the measure introduced by Kerr Hardie, Socialist, last year, has evoked far greater general interest. The bill simply provides that women shall have the franchise on the same terms upon which it is now granted to men. The militant tactics of the women suffragists of recent months and their bold raids on the House of Commons itself, resulting in the imprisonment of scores of the female crusaders, have given the question unusual prominence. The House of Commons was crowded when the debate on the proposed measure began, but only women whose good behavior was guaranteed by members of Parliament were permitted to enter the gallery. All those who were connected with he recent disorders within the precincts of the House of Parliament were specifically excluded, and in view of possible disorderly demonstrations on the part of the "suffragetes" extraordinary precautions were taken by the police to bar the approaches to the House of Commons. The forces inside and outside the building were doubled and a special department of police was held in reserve, in spite of the fact that the militant women had announced that they would quietly await the vote in the house, after which they would decide on their future action.

The suffrage societies were very active throughout the morning, trying to insure the attendance of all the supposed supporters of the bill, and they claimed to have 430 members pledged to vote for it. All members who were considered to be in the least lukewarm were admonished by telephone or telegram this morning that their seats would be endangered if they failed to fulfill their pledges. It is admitted that many promises to support the bill were given by Liberals on the supposition that the women if enfranchised would vote for Liberal candidates, but the return of the large Conservative majority at the municipal elections in London Saturday last, in which the women voted, tended to dispel this illusion, and since then many members of Parliament who nominally sympathized with Mr. Dickinson's bill have been stricken with mysterious illnesses, which will not permit them to attend today's session of the House of Commons. There were no fewer than 16 motions hostile to the bill placed on the table, while just prior to the opening of the debate a petition, signed by 21,000 women, was presented, protesting against granting suffrage to women on the ground that it would destroy their influence in their own sphere of work.

After Mr. Dickinson's opening speech in support of the bill, the premier, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, announced that it is the intention of the government [illegible] the question to the free decision of the house. Personally, he favored the general principle of the inclusion of women in the suffrage. The matter had assumed more importance of late years, owing to the larger part which women had taken in wage earning and in the professions.

On many questions, the opinion of women is equal to, if not greater, than that of men. He frankly stated that he is not enamoured with the present bill because it will not enfranchise to the necessary degree the mass of the working class women and workmen's wives. He would vote for the bill, however, as a declaration of his opinion that the exclusion of women from the franchise is not expedient, 'justifiable, or politically right.

The debate was a repetition of the familiar arguments for and against female suffrage, and there was a complete divergence from the usual parliamentary lines, the rejection of the bill being moved by Mr. Whitehead, Liberal, another opponent being Mr. Cremer, also a Liberal, while both Conservatives and members of the Labor party were found among its supporters. An attempt was made to closure the discussion, but the Speaker declined to accept the motion and the opponents of the bill held the floor until 5 p. m., when the sitting was closed automatically. They thus won the day, as this practically kills the bill for the present session.

ACQUIRES LARGE INTEREST.

New Haven Road to Have Voice in Control of Merchant's Line.

BOSTON, March 8.—Ellerton P. Whitney of this city, first vice president of the Merchant & Miners' Transportation Company, said today with reference to the reported acquirement of his company by the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad that negotiations for the transfer of stock have been in progress for some time. Mr. Whitney stated that on account of the large amount of business which the New Haven road carried on with the Merchants line, it would do no harm if the railroad corporation should have a voice in the control of the steamship company.

Mr. Whitney continued: "It should not be understood from this that the Merchants & Miners' Transportation Company either will change its officers or be in any way absorbed by the Consolidated interests. A statement of that character would be going too far.

"The plan is for the New Haven road to acquire a large interest, though not necessarily a majority of the stock, but still large enough, so that by that means, and by an agreement largely in the nature of a traffic contract, it will xercise a strong influence over the affairs of the line."

CALLS BRAYTON A COMMON NUISANCE.

Directs That He be Ejected From State House.

Governor Writes Scathing Letter to Sheriff White.

PROVIDENCE, March 8.—A letter directing the sheriff of Providence county, General Hunter C. White, to permit no longer General Charles R. Brayton the use of the high sheriff's office for alleged lobbying, was sent to the sheriff today by Governor James H. Higgins. In his letter the governor scathingly condemns General Brayton, stating that he is "the recognized Republican boss of the state," and demands that Sheriff White oust the general from his office. The letter in part follows:

"Sir: January 26 of this year I had a conference with the state house commissioners, in which I requested them to instruct you to keep Charles R. Brayton out of your office. They stated to me that they did not believe their power was sufficient under the law to justify them in doing so. They referred me to the legislature and to you. They suggested that if I called the matter officially to your attention you would probably act.

"In vain have I appealed to you in private. I now appeal to you publicly. In the name of the citizens of Rhode Island I demand that you refuse to allow Mr. Brayton to use the property of the state of Rhode Island for his private pleasure and profit.

"Year in and year out he has occupied and used your office for his vile purposes, with your knowledge and consent. Your office, room 207, has been the lobby headquarters of Brayton. The situation therefore resolves itself to this: The state house of Rhode Island, a building paid for by the people of the state supposed to be used exclusively for public and legitimate purposes, has been turned over, so far as your office is concerned to the private and illegitimate use of Brayton.

"It cannot truthfully be said that Brayton comes to your office as a private citizens or as a friend. You are the only one of all the officials occupying quarters at the state house who allow those quarters to be used for unlawful lobbying.

"This demand is based upon two reasons:

First, that neither you nor any other public official has the right to utilize the public property of the state for private or improper purposes. He receives his legislative clients and visitors there; stations his emissaries at the door of your room, and he, not you, says who shall and who shall not receive admittance to that room. Does Brayton pay rent for room 207 to you, or to the state?

"The second reason for my demand is that you have no right to encourage a common nuisance on state property. Brayton is unquestionably a common nuisance. You know the man's degenerate character better than I do.

"The man's continued presence in the capitol offers daily scandal to the men, women and children of the state. Several times a week children from various parts of the commonwealth came to visit the capitol, and immediately on stepping from the elevator are greted with this unseemly spectacle in your room.

"In my conference with the state house commissioners January 26 one of the commissioners declared that he himself had told you on a former occasion that you ought not to allow the man to make his headquarters in your office, and that you replied: 'What can I do? I would not put Brayton out of my office for all the positions in the state.' Now, sir, I am going to ask you what right you have to barter away the public property and the public honor of this state in the payment of your political obligations? I want to ask you further, how long you propose to continue this glaring misconduct?

"It is unnecessary for me to add that this communication is not prompted by personal ill-feeling or malice toward either you or Mr. Brayton. The responsibility therefore, for this unpleasant task, is not on my shoulders. Both you and Brayton have had fair and ample warning.

"In the name therefore of the decent citizenship of the commonwealth, I demand that you clean this moral and political pest out of your office. In the name of common, civilized virtue, I demand that you no longer persist in allowing a part of this capitol to be used as the headquarters of a notorious lobbyist.

"Very truly yours,
"James H. Higgins.
"Governor."

TO BE SOLD TO MINERS' LINE.

Boston & Philadelphia Steamship Company.

NEW YORK, March 8.—It was reported today on what was apparently good authority that the Boston & Philadelphia Steamship Company, which was recently purchased by the Neww York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, will be sold to the Merchants & Miners' Transportation Company of Baltimore. The latter company owns several stamers running from southern ports to New England. It was also reported that the New York, New Haven & Hartford will purchase sufficient of the stock and bonds of the Merchants & Miners' Company to enable it to maintain the present rate of the schedule from the south to New England ports. It is said, however, that the railroad will not purchase control of the steamship company.

[Special despatch to the News.]

PROVIDENCE, March 8.—There were four absentees in the General Assembly today when the vote was taken for United States Senator. In addition to Lieutenant Governor Jackson and Senator Parrott, who have been absent for several days, Senator Palmer, a Colt man, and Representative Boucher, a Goddard supporter, were not in their seats. The result of the ballot was as follows:

For Robert H. I. Goddard, 40.
For Samuel P. Colt, 36.
For George P. Wetmore, 30.
For George H Utter, 1.

Senator Gardner introduced an act making it a misdemeanor for persons to deface books belonging to any public library and providing a fine of $20 for conviction on such an offense; also a fine of $10 for failure to return books after having received due notice to comply with the regulations under which the books were obtained. The act was referred to the judiciary committee.

SENATOR FROST A CANDIDATE.

Republican Railroad Commissionership Postponed.

(Special despatch to the News.)

PROVIDENCE, March 8.—Today the candidacy of Senator William L. Frost of Tiverton for the position of railroad commissioner assumed such proportions as to cause the postponement of a contemplated caucus of the Republican senators from this afternoon until next Tuesday. It had been planned to endorse ex-Speaker Joseph P. Burlingame, but owing to the fact that Mr. Frost is now an avowed candidate the Republican members decided to put over the matter of selecting a candidate for further consideration.

In the matter of a member of the State Board of Agriculture, it is understood that Senator John Walsh, who was considered a probable candidate, has withdrawn and that the senate will confirm the nomination of William S. Nichols of Lincoln, which Governor Higgins sent to the senate yesterday.

TRIAL POSTPONED UNTIL MONDAY.

Jerome Not Ready to Proceed in Rebuttal.

Action the Result of Resting of the Defense.

NEW YORK, March 8.—The trial of Harry K. Thaw today was adjourned until Monday next at 10:30 a. m., after Attorney Delphin M. Delmas had announced upon the opening of court that the defense had concluded its testimony. District Attorney Jerome stated that he had not witnesses ready to proceed in rebuttal, and at his request an adjournment was taken.

This action was not unexpected, for Mr. Delmas served notice late yesterday upon the district attorney that the defense had abandoned its plan of calling to more experts. Mr. Jerome did not consider the notification as official, and so came into court this morning prepared to listen to more testimony as to Thaw's unfortunate condition of mind. The court session was opened with all the usual formalities, and the room was well filled with spectators. Thaw was bright and smiling as he walked to his place at the counsel table. His two brothers, Edward and Josiah, again were in court, and he smiled a greeting to them. The prisoner's arms were filled as usual with the big brown envelopes containing his correspondence.

When Justice Fitzgerald had ascended the bench and Clerk Penny had called the roll call, Mr. Delmas arose

DISAGREE WITH HARRIMAN.

Rock Island President Does not Believe in Six-Foot Gauge Roads.

CHICAGO, March 8.—Railroad men in Chicago do not agree entirely with E. H. Harriman's views regarding the physical aspect of the railroad of the future. Asked to express his views regarding the future railroad, B. L. Winchell, president of the Rock Island, yesterday, said: "It would seem to me that if all the railroads in the United States should be changed at once into six-foot gauge roads we will be troubled with even a greater car and power shortage than exists at present. The first six-foot gauge road would find itself in a pretty unfortunate predicament.

"How do you think it would get its traffic to other roads or the traffic of connecting lines to its own rails? There are, however, many things to be said in favor of a broader gauge. There is the element of greater safety; it will be possible to use bigger cars, and with bigger engines we could haul greater loads. If, however, we are to seriously face changing the gauge of our railroads, I do not see where the money is to come from; "in fact, there would not be money enough in the country. Every bridge would have to be rebuilt, and every car we now have would be useless. The $5,000,000,000 which James J. Hill says is necessary to spend during the next five years accomplishing the transportation necessities of the country would be an infinitesimal amount if we are to adopt a six-foot gauge."

WALKER ALSO A FORGER.

Evidence to This Effect to be Offered to the Grand Jury.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 8.—Evidence which is said to indicate that William F. Walker, the defaulting treasurer of the Savings Bank of New Britain, is also a forger to the extent of several thousand dollars, will be offered, it was said today, to the grand jury, which will consider embezzlement charges against Walker next Tuesday. The alleged evidence, which is understood to be in the hands of the state attorney, is said to show that Walker forged notes payable to himself as treasurer of the Connecticut Baptist Convention, and by so doing had been able to cover up his alleged stealings for several years.

BERLIN, March 8.—The government won its first victory in the new Reichstag today, when that body passed by a large majority the second reading of the supplementary appropriation bill for German Southwest Africa, and also the appropriation for bringing the work of the railroad from Kubub to Keetmanshoop. DEFENSE RESTS ITS CASE.

District Attorney Jerome Surprised by Sudden Move of Delmas.

NEW YORK, March 7.—Delphin M. Delmas, chief of counsel for Thaw, announced this afternoon that no more witnesses will be called by the defense. The direct evidence for the prisoner thus closes with the testimony of Mrs. William Thaw, mother of the defendant, and it is said that at today's conference of Thaw's lawyers it was decided that no better climax could have been reached by the defense. Several of Thaw's attorneys visited him in the Tombs today, and when he was told of their decision he heartily concurred in the arrangement.

District Attorney Jerome was notified this afternoon of the change of plans. He was taken by surprise and would make no comments, but immediately set about making a move to meet the situation. It was the intention of the Thaw lawyers to keep this unexpected step a secret, but one of them let out the news.

With the announcement that the case of the defense is closed all question of a lunacy commission to decide whether or not Thaw is now sane disappeared. From now on it will be the aim of the prosecution to fight for nothing but a conviction. There may be some surprises in the testimony in rebuttal by the prosecution. One thing is certain, the district attorney's office does not believe that enough evidence has been produced by the defense to show that Thaw was insane on the night he killed Stanford White, and that is the only question now at issue.

Although there have been many unexplained and unexpected moves by the defense, it was clear that nobody was more surprised than District Attorney Jerome when he got word that the defense would rest tomorrow morning.

Mr. Delmas would make no explanation of the sudden change in the plan of the defense. Two alienists, Drs. Hammond and Jelliffe, were to have been questioned tomorrow morning on a long hypothetical question covering all the salient points in the case. These two doctors have been something of an expense to the defense. It is said that one of them had a retainer of $5,000. They have been in court several days, but outside of that they have done nothing, except possibly to advise Mr. Delmas.

When court adjourned Wednesday it was the understanding that the two experts would be called tomorrow. Over night Mr. Delmas changed his mind. He is said to have decided that Mrs. William Thaw was logically the last witness for the defense. Mr. Delmas has great confidence in the sentimental effect the testimony of the gray-haired mother of the defendant had on the jury. Having satisfied his mind on that point he at once decided that he would not call any more witnesses.

Immediately after Mr. Jerome was informed by Mr. Delmas that the experts would not be called tomorrow there was a great deal of activity around the district attorney's office. Mr. Jerome summoned his assistant, Francis P. Garvan, who has had charge of the preparation of the Thaw case, and then they called into consultation Assistant District Attorney Nott, who has not had anything to do with the case before. The three had a long conference.

It is almost certain that no further attempt will be made by District Attorney Jerome for the appointment of a lunacy commission. In substance Justice Fitzgerald has ruled that the question of Thaw's sanity now is not an issue of the trial, and nothing will be done by the court unless a formal application for a commission is made by Mr. Jerome, based on evidence of Thaw's insanity now. As Mr. Jerome's experts have not had a chance to examine Thaw there is nothing on which to base an application for a commission by the district attorney.

Within the last week Mr. Jerome has received a number of threatening letters. They come from all over the country. Even the Black Hand has threatened him with death for not being fair to Harry Thaw. Mr. Jerome has paid no attention to the letters.

ARCHIE ROOSEVELT WORSE.

Has Sudden Sinking Spell and Entire Family Summoned.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The condition of Archie Roosevelt, the President's son, who was stricken with diphtheria last Friday, took a turn for the worse tonight. The doctors say if his vitality holds out through the night there will be hope of his recovery.

President Roosevelt, who has heretofore observed the quarantine restrictions placed upon that part of the White House where Archie is segregated, was summoned to the boy's bedside at 9 o'clock this evening, and remained with him from that time on.

Archie was then in an extremely serious condition, according to unofficial information, and a conference of physicians was called. At 10:20 o'clock Surgeon General P. M. Rixey of the navy left the White House and gave out this reassuring statement:

"Archie Roosevelt has materially improved since noon, when considerable anxiety was felt on account of weak heart action. At 10:20 p. m. the case is favorable, with a normal temperature and the heart acting well."

The sinking spell which Archie suffered at noon frightened the family and medical attendants of the child. As soon as he learned of the serious turn his son's illness had taken the President directed that Dr. Alexander Lambert of New York, the Roosevelt family physician, be sent for at once. Dr. Lambert reached Washington shortly after 8 o'clock this evening and went immediately from the station to the White House, where he took charge of the case.

As a result of his examination of the patient a medical consultation was called. It was attended by Dr. Lambert, Surgeon General Rixey and Surgeons Kennedy, Braisted and Pryor of the navy.

Dr. Lambert on his arrival found that Archie was dangerously ill. At 9 o'clock 2,000 units of toxin, a large dose for a child of his years, was administered and Archie apparently rallied.

It was rumored that the President had been informed by Dr. Lambert that Archie had one chance to pull through, but the physician thought he would make it. Drs. Lambert, Kennedy and Braisted will remain with the patient all night.

Mrs. Roosevelt is almost constantly at the boy's bedside and never leaves the immediate vicinity of the room where Archie is lying and over which the quarantine has been established.

Miss Ethel Roosevelt, who was at the home of Surgeon General Rixey, was called hastily to the White House shortly before 8 o'clock.

It is understood that the President has telegraphed to his sons, Theodore, jr., and Kermit, the former at Harvard and the latter at Groton, to come to Washington, although at the executive offices this would neither be confirmed nor denied.

THE ARMY ENGINEERS.

Corps of Men Called to do Work of Panama Canal Eminently Fitted For Arduous Task.

[New York Mail.]

While the administration has been casting about for the most available man or agency to dig the Panama canal, and turning from one quarter to another to secure what it wanted, always in the background there has been waiting the proper instrument. That instrument at last the President has taken in his hand. The army engineering service has been called upon to do the work that many public men have believed from the outset it was fittest to perform.

The country has tried eminent civil engineers, with the result that their eminence has strangely shriveled in the tropic heat of the isthmus. At the suggestion of one of them, it considered for a while the advisability of having the canal dug by contract. There again a tangle resulted. Whether or not the administration was hasty in discarding the contract idea after once entertaining it, it has done well in giving the army engineers a chance.

These men are not accustomed to question a job and ask it whether it promises reputation or wealth. They are accustomed to doing arduous work, even if comparative obscurity envelops it. Executing their duty and "doing things," no matter at what discomfort, no matter how long the campaign, is their tradition. They have not been bred up in an atmosphere of "mollycoddling." They can stand criticism. They have been too busy to play politics or to cultivate politicians.

Unhappily the name of "contractor," in the history of this city at least, has too often stood for incidents that may have seemed necessary, things being as they were, but were not pleasant. Graft has fastened itself upon too many public contracts, and might have pursued the Panama contract had it been let. It is the unique distinction of the corps of army engineers that only twice in its century-long history has scandal affected it, the better known instance being that of Captain Carter.

The men who compose this service have managed with discretion and integrity the public works involving the hundreds of millions of expenditure authorized under the river and harbor bills. Their monuments are seen in deepened harbors, breakwaters, dredged rivers, improved waterways. The people scarcely know the names of the modest and tireless public servants who have done this work, yet it includes the successful accomplishment of engineering problems as difficult as the Panama canal, and of not much less magnitude.

The last shift in the Isthmian kaleidoscope has had at least this advantage, that it has called attention to a department of the government service whose tradition and achievement honor the American name.

HOW KNIVES CUT.

[C. H. Claudy in St. Nicholas.]

Knives, no matter how carefully sharpened, are little saws; the grinding away of the steel, done by the stone, is not an even work, but when the edge gets thin, is a process of tearing away tiny bits of steel by the grit of the stone. This tearing makes the teeth. A fine stone makes fine teeth, a coarse stone coarse teeth. A carving knife, used on meat, is sharpened on a coarse stone or a steel, and has coarse teeth, although its edge is thick. Its action in parting the meat is more that of a saw than a fine wedge. No matter how soft it may be, it will not cut easily unless it is drawn over the meat and not simply pressed down.

A razor, however, with its paper-like edge, will cut into flesh with a simple pressure—it is a wedge divided the fibers of flesh just as a wedge of iron divides the fibers of the log it splits. But a razor is a saw, too, only, as it is ground on the finest stones and later finished with a leather strap, its teeth are very fine indeed—hundreds and hundreds to the inch of blade.

ALASKA'S BIG BEARS.

[Scribner's Magazine.]

Very few persons really know that the largest flesh-eating animals in the world are found in America. People generally believe that the African lion is the king of beasts, but he is not nearly as large or as powerful an animal as the large brown bear of sub-Arctic America.

The bears are not as ferocious or combative as the lions, nor are they nearly as vicious as they are given credit for being, but the largest of them are much larger and more powerful than any of the lions. It is safe to say that the largest of the brown bears of the North would weigh three times as much as the largest specimen of lion, and is beyond all question greatly superior in strength.

If brought together in combat, the bear would at first appear very clumsy. It would not be capable of the quick rush or the catlike spring of the lion.

It would not attack, but would remain entirely on the defensive, meeting its adversary with blows of such rapidity and terrific force as at once to illustrate its superiority not only in strength, but in action. I do not believe that there is an animal in the world that can act more quickly or effectively or can aim its blows with greater certainty than the bear.

The large brown bears of the Alaska peninsula, south of Behring sea, are among the largest bears of the world, and it is evident that there is no part of the world outside of America in with such large flesh-eating animals are found. The bears are flesh eaters, or carnivorous, yet there are none of them that depend upon flesh for food, and with most of them flesh comprises but a small percentage of their food.

COAL TAR COLOR INDUSTRY

[London Globe.]

Out of the making of gas has grown the great coal tar color industry. The history of the discovery of aniline, the basis of the various aniline dyes, is interesting. By the distillation of indigo M. Unverdorben produced a substance which he named crystaline. Some nine years later, viz., in 1835, Runge discovered in coal tar a substance which produced a beautiful blue color when treated with chloride of lime. This he named kyanol. Five years later a substance was obtained by treating indigo with caustic potash, and named aniline, from "anil," the specific name of one of the indigo plants.

Then it was found that crystaline, kyanol and aniline were chemically the same. Then, it was shown that aniline, the basis of the indigo dyes, occurred in the waste product of the manufacture of gas, and the possibilities of a new source of these dyes hinted at. And in 1858 Dr. Perkin took out a patent for the manufacture of a dye stuff made from aniline which became widely known as "Perkin's purple." Others followed in quick succession, and the great coal tar color industry was established.

IMPORTS INCREASE $27,000,500.

Gains in Exports Are in Fuel and Manufactured Goods.

LONDON, March 7.—The February statement of the board of trade shows increases of $27,000,500 in imports and $16,511,000 in exports. The principal increase in imports is in raw materials, $20,000,000 in cotton from America and $5,000,000 in wool from Australasia. The increases in exports are in fuel and manufactured goods.

THE OLD SLAVE MARKET OF MEMPHIS.

[Memphis Commercial Appeal.]

Grim, unsightly, paintless, seamed and crooked throughout its masonry, there stands today an old brick building on Adams street, midway between Main and Second, about which clusters more of history and of change than can be compressed into song or story. It is situated just on the east of the alley midway between Main and Second streets, and is used as a shelter for the city prisoners who are worked on the rock pile. If you will take the trouble to step to the westward side of this old building, where it faces the alley, and glance up along its second story you may still discern the inscription: "Negro Mart and Livery Stable," or as much of it as time has not penciled out. The last letter of the word "mart" and the last letter of the word "stable" are gone. The others are dimmed with age and might pass unnoticed unless you look a second time.

Time was, nearly half a century ago, when this was a famous negro market. It was presided over, in its time, by no less a man than General Forrest himself. Thousands of negroes were bought and sold within its walls, and hundreds of thousands of dollars passed there from buyer to vendor. One old, gray-headed negro told the writer a few days ago: "I've seen many a bushel o' money piled up on the upstaihs flo'—gold money, sah, in de ole days. Yes, sah, I 'members Gin'l Forrest, an' he was de heatenes' man I ever seen. Dey done what he tole 'em, sah; an' he only tole 'em once."

A SIX COURSE DINNER.

Amount of Materials Given Sufficient for Six Persons.

Any Fresh Water Fish May be Used for Timbale—Select Solid Round for the Beef a la Mode.

[Cornelia C. Bedford.]

The following dinner is good enough for a dinner party, yet not too intricate or costly to be served at the home table. The needed materials can be found in any section of the country.

Cream of Pea Soup.
Fish Timbale. Sauce Allemande.
Parisienne Potatoes.
Beef a la Mode. Brown Gravy.
Rice Croquettes. Spinach.
Tomato Jelly Salad. Cheese Fingers.
Hamburg Cream.
Coffee.

In planning the amount of materials needed it will be found easy to add or take from the quantities here given, which are sufficient for six persons.

Open one can of June peas and turn the entire contents into the soup kettle. Add one bay leaf, a blade of mace, a half teaspoonful of salt, a dozen peppercorns and a pint of boiling water. Simmer slowly for 15 minutes, working frequently with a wooden beetle or wire potato masher that the peas may be well broken. Press through a sieve, working to get all the pulp possible, then return to the fire. In a double boiler prepare a thin sauce with one large tablespoonful of butter, two scant tablespoonfuls of flour and one pint of milk. With this gradually blend the pea pulp, add more seasoning if necessary and simmer for 10 minutes longer.

Take one pound and a half of cod, or any fresh water fish with white flesh and large bones. Remove the skin and bones, cut the raw flesh in pieces, pass through a food chopper, then pound to a paste and press through a sieve. From the middle of a stale loaf of bread take one cupful and a half of fine crumbs, mix them with three quarters of a cupful of milk and stir over the fire to a smooth paste. Mix this with the fish pulp, a scant teaspoonful of salt and a dash of cayenne. Beat in lightly and gradually the stiffly beaten whites of five eggs. Fill a buttered mold with the mixture, stand in a pan partly filled with hot water and place in a moderate oven for about three quarters of an hour, or until firm in the centre when lightly pressed with the finger. Make a cream sauce with a cupful and a half of milk, one heaping tablespoonful each of flour and butter, and salt and pepper to taste. Just before taking from the fire add one teaspoonful of lemon juice and the yolks of two eggs mixed with a tablespoonful of cream.

Dice sufficient potatoes to make a pint. Boil in salted water until barely tender. Drain, return to the fire, add one tablespoonful of butter, salt and pepper to taste and shake often until the butter is absorbed. When taken from the fire sprinkle with chopped parsley.

Five pounds of round of beef cut in a solid piece will make a good piece. Mix one cupful of vinegar, a tablespoonful of salt, a large onion chopped fine, a half teaspoonful each of pepper, mustard, cloves and allspice. Boil five minutes, chill, pour over the meat and turn often for six hours. Make deep incisions in the meat and press into them strips of fat salt pork rolled in a mixture of spices. Tie in compact shape and brown quickly on all sides in a little hot fat. Remove to a covered pan. Brown in the fat two large onions and a carrot cut fine. Place these round the meat, half cover with boiling water, add a tablespoonful of herbs tied in muslin, cover and simmer until very tender—this takes about four hours. Transfer to a hot platter, remove the strings and serve.

Pick over and wash a half peck or more of spinach, removing all wilted leaves. As this green is apt to be very sandy use five or six waters. Drain and drop into a large kettle of salted, boiling water and boil, uncovered, until the midribs feel tender. Drain, drop into cold water for 10 minutes then drain again, pressing until very dry. Chop fine and re-heat in two tablespoonfuls of butter and salt and pepper to taste.

For the tomato jelly salad, put in a saucepan a half can of tomatoes, a bay leaf, four cloves, a blade of mace, a half teaspoonful of salt, half as much paprika, 10 drops of onion juice and simmer gently for 10 minutes. Add one third of a package of gelatine which has been soaked in a half cupful of cold water until soft, stir until dissolved. Take from the fire, add two tablespoonfuls of tarragon vinegar, press through a sieve and turn into one large or individual molds wet in cold water. When firm turn out and arrange on a bed of lettuce leaves. With it serve a good mayonnaise.

The cheese fingers are quickly made and very savory. Mix one cupful of flour, quarter teaspoonful of salt, a dash of cayenne, a half teaspoonful of baking powder; rub into this two tablespoonfuls of butter, add a half cupful of grated cheese and mix to a dough with ice water. Roll out in a thin sheet, cut in half inch strips with a jagging iron and bake pale brown in a moderate oven.

Separate the whites and yolks of four eggs. Beat the yolks with six ounces of powdered sugar until very light and thick. Add the grated rind of two lemons and stir over the fire in a large double boiler until thick, adding gradually the strained lemon juice. When thick and smooth add the whites whipped to a stiff froth and cut and stir for three minutes longer. Take from the fire and heap in small glasses.

Allow one tablespoonful of finely ground coffee and two thirds of a cupful of boiling water for each person. Use a drip pot and serve the coffee clear, strong and hot.

A GAIN TO LITERATURE.

[Providence Journal.]

Professor Henry van Dyke's withdrawal from the faculty of Princeton University involves an unquestioned gain to literature. He is a graceful essayist and critic, and a poet of no mean ability; and though even during his teaching years he has managed to find time to produce much, the leisure that will now come to him through his release from the routine duties of the class room should be reflected in a larger and perhaps a better product.

Dr. van Dyke would be the last to compare himself with Longfellow, yet there is an analogy between them in their years of combined teaching and writing, and their eventual escape from the bonds of the former. The Princeton professor, however, has one distinction that the Cambridge scholar never acquired; he was a well known preacher before he became a college instructor, and his New York church was one of the few that did not complain of a falling off in the size of the congregation.

Arrivals of eggs in New York Monday and Tuesday were 49,207 cases of 30 dozen each—or nearly 17,000,000 eggs. This would make a train of 164 cars holding 300 cases each.

SUNDAY LITERATURE.

Reading Matter Suitable to the Spirit of the Day Selected by Those Who Regard the Sabbath.

We do not speak of Sunday morning literature, for what churchgoer has time for that? It is in the quiet hours of the afternoon and night that one's tastes may exercise itself—and is it not almost superfluous to say, that for the true believer the best literature is that which is in keeping with the spirit of the day? We know all about the prejudice against Puritanism, against dreaminess and religion, and all that; but we ask if any modern plea for news, for the up to date, for the practical, should rob us of our reverence for those words of sage and bard which lift us nearer to the things which are unseen and eternal.

It may be considered by some the height of old fogyness to speak of "Pilgrim's Progress," for nowadays one hardly dares to name the biographies even of David Brainerd, of John Brainerd Taylor, of Henry Martyn or the devoted Dr. Buchanan and Adoniram Judson. But from a purely secular view the "Pilgrim Progress" is the very standard of idiomatic English. The poor tinker in Bedford jail bequeathed to uncounted millions of Saxons a treasury of English undefiled, and professors of English literature who are honest in presenting the true perspective cannot ignore him. With the Bible itself and Shakespeare the monosyllable and dissyllabic terseness of that wonderful genius has its abiding value, even with those who see afar no pearly gates and no celestial city.

It is simply wonderful that a book whose theological meaning has been rudely discarded by so many professing Christians, should still hold its own with the severest critic of English. As well might a Tory claim that Cromwell never benefited England as for a scholar to claim that John Bunyan could ever be in the higher sense of the term a literary back number.

The highest praise, we think, which can be accorded to any work of the imagination is most peculiarly due to the "Pilgrim's Progress," that its written picture can be transferred so naturally and vividly to the painted canvas. Christian with his bundle on his back starting out from the City of Destruction, Christian at the wicket gate, the Palace Beautiful, with the lions in the way; Christian and Faithful at Vanity Fair; the castle of Giant Despair, the Enchanted Ground and the Delectable Mountains—what more exquisite frame work of imagination ready to leap into the canvas? Then, too, the sight of the saints passing through the deep water and safely landing on the celestial shore—is there anything at variance with this severest theology of any known Christian creed in this? Can there be anything more rich in descriptive genius?

The time and space would fail us to enumerate the many excellent books, whic hin this age of omnivorous Sunday newspaper and non-reading, might life our thoughts to be in unison with the half heavenly character of the day itself. How can people attend church and perhaps partake of the memorial of Christ's passion and then spend the rest of the Sabbath hours in mere slumber or dawdling over spicy details of secular newspaper "scoops"—murders, suicides, elopements, all sorts of harrowing and depressing themes—to say nothing of base ball, football and other things, innocent perhaps in themselves, but out of keeping certainly with the spirit of God's holy day! Is it not time for the Christian church to lay more emphasis on this very feature—the right sort of Sunday reading? Shall it be all newspaper and no reading? Can any sincere Christian man or woman defend it?

PERSONALS.

....Peter E. Bowman, who has been station agent at Stamford, Conn., for four years, is about to retire, after a service of nearly 40 years with the New Haven railroad. Mr. Bowman entered the New Haven railroad as a clerk in New Haven in 1868.

....The will of the Baroness Burdett-Coutts gives the gross value of the estate as $395,000. The small sum is due to the fact that the baroness endowed charities and churches with large sums during her lifetime, and transferred much of her capital to her husband.

....According to an inventory of estate left by J. Montgomery Sears of Boston is appraised at $3,855,353. The smallness of the estate, which was hinted at when the will was filed, caused more or less speculation, and the inventory of the estate has been awaited with interest, with a view to ascertain the nature of the property left by the testator, who had been reputed to be the wealthiest citizen of Boston.

Under the Brim Trimming Shifts to the Front.

As usual at the start of the season there are several radical departures from accepted styles that are tried, as it were, tentatively, and as they are met with favor or otherwise their future career is settled.

One of the prettiest of the recent innovations in this line is a smart sailor shape, one of those saucer-brimmed affairs, in white chip, provided with a bandeau of goodly depth. The novelty consists in the fact that the steepest part of the bandeau is in the front instead of at the back as heretofore; the brim turns up sharply off the face and the bandeau is covered with a huge rosette bow of white messaline ribbon, some of the edges being deftly wired to hold the shape. Wired ends of black velvet ribbon are caught into a chou and posed beside the white, this being repeated in the trimming around the crown where the strands of black and white ribbons are mixed, and the loops and ends that decorate the back being composed equally of white satin and black velvet ribbons.

FAITH.

[Lillian Bennet Thompson, in Success Magazine.]

All the world seems dark and dreary;
Clouds have dimmed the sunlight's glow;
Just a year, dear, since we parted,
Yet it seems so long ago!

But I know the time is coming.
When the summer wind blows sweet;
I shall find you in the sunset,
Where the gold and crimson meet.

FANCIES.

Papa—I never told lies when I was a boy.

Son—When did you begin, papa?—[Slovo.

"It's hard," said Uncle Eben, "to be entirely idle. De man dat won' work generally likes up a heap of energy dodgin' roun' an' gettin' in de way."—[Washington Star.

Watchman (discovering a burglar in the act of opening a bank safe)—Hold on! What are you doing there?

Burglar—Don't make such a row, old man. I want to see if my deposit is all right. Nobody can trust his bankers nowadays.—[Tit-Bits.

Cholly Nowlit—D'ye know, Miss Smart, though I've only just met you, there seems to be a sort of intellectual sympathy between us? You know just how to appeal to my tastes, you see. Are you a literary woman?

Dolly Smart—No; I'm a kindergarten teacher.—[Philadelphia Inquirer.

Riggs—My wife had a queer accident befall her the other week. As she was walking along the street a man's hat blew off and struck her in the eye. It cost me a guinea for a doctor's bill.

Briggs—Oh, that's nothing. My wife was walking along the street the other day, and as she passed a milliner's a bonnet in the window struck her eye, and it cost me two pounds ten.—[Tit-Bits.

A woman preached one morning a temperance sermon to her husband, who was suffering from the effects of the night before.

"The great trouble with you, George," the woman said, "is that you cannot say 'No.' Learn to say 'No,' George, and you will have fewer headaches. Can you let me have a little money this morning?"

"No," said George, with apparent ease.—[Baltimore Methodist.

TEN PAGES.

MORE FREQUENT STEAMBOAT INSPECTION.

The new order requiring more frequent inspection of steamboats is of particular interest to Rhode Island, inasmuch as in the course of a year probably a large proportion of the people of the state are passengers on steamers plying along the Sound or on the waters of Narragansett bay. This new order, as is well known, is the result of the disaster by which so many passengers and members of the crew of steamer Larchmont lost their lives a few weeks ago, and it is a matter of public congratulation that the authorities acted so promptly in preparing regulations the enforcement of which will make materially for the increased safety of those who travel by water between here and Providence or along the Sound to New York. As the new rule applies to all steam craft, whether operated the entire year or only a few weeks in summer, it will mean that steamers of all classes which carry passengers will be inspected frequently while in service, and thus any defect in equipment or weakness in construction can be speedily detected and promptly remedied.

There is no real ground for belief that the excursion boats which ply up and down the bay so often during the summer months, and carry such a large number of passengers on almost every trip as to be considerably crowded, are not in condition to ensure reasonable safety to those who travel on them, but in view of the accident to the Larchmont it will undoubtedly greatly increase the feeling of confidence in these craft to know that hereafter they will be inspected, not only before the season begins but during the time of operation. The wear and tear upon steamers of this class in the mild weather of summer is not of course great, and yet there is always the possibility of weakness in machinery, if not in hull, and deterioration of equipment.

The fact which is always apparent in the case of steamers which carry large numbers of passengers, that their facilities for removing in safety all those on board in case of an accident at some distance from land are inadequate, is in a way emphasized in connection with these excursion craft, for the number on board in their case is always greater in comparison with the size and equipment of the steamers than on the larger vessels which run along the Sound. On the other hand, of course these excursion boats do not go so far from land as the Sound steamers, but this advantage is possibly more than offset by the increased numbers on board and the consequent greater difficulty which would be experienced in case of accident in transferring them to land. In view of these conditions, it is extremely desirable that every precaution for the safety of passengers should be taken, and this new one of more frequent official inspection will be generally approved.

While the accident to the Larchmont has probably had little or no appreciable effect upon the number of travelers by water along the Sound, and will have none the coming season in connection with the excursion business on the bay, there are at all times many people who are more or less timid about boats, and to these especially the fact that new precautions are to be taken to make steam craft safe and travel on them free from danger will be reassuring. The effect ought to be felt also, in some measure at least, by the traffic managers, for these new restrictions will impose no hardship upon the companies which furnish public transportation. But on the contrary will be a decided advantage to them, in making the public feel that the safety of the people is better provided for. The new rules, therefore, are in the interests of both the people and the transportation companies, and should be equally welcome to both.

THE PRECEDENTS AGAINST THE LORDS.

Apropos of the present strained relations between the two branches of Parliament, and the proposal of the ministry to abridge in some way the prerogatives of the House of Lords, a writer in the Pall Mall Mail cites three notable occasions in the nineteenth century when the House of Commons and the House of Lords were in opposition. This draft upon history is a little curious, in view of the fact that in each of these instances the Lords were forced to yield and that the Pall Mall Mail is on the side of the Lords in their opposition to the education bill.

In 1831 the Lords defeated the reform bill which had passed the Commons by a large majority. The Duke of Wellington said his experience as a minister of the crown had taught him that he "must resist all projects of Parliamentary reform." Lord Winchilsea said the people wanted Parliamentary reform only because they "imagined it would give them cheap food." To Lord Wynford the reform bill meant "the end of the monarchy." The Duke of Wellington had spoken of "wild democracy masquerading as a House of Commons," and declared that he did not see how the king's government could be carried on under such a system. Various lords complained that their house had been threatened, and declared that it was their duty to protect the sovereign against his ministry. One bishop voted for the reform bill and the Archbishop of Canterbury and a score or more of bishops voted against it. It was defeated, but the following year the Lords were compelled to vote for a reform bill.

In 1861 the Lords opposed a proposal to take the tax off paper. Their principal argument was that the remission of the tax would benefit none but the editors of penny papers. Of course the press was generally obnoxious to the Lords, and the idea of conceding anything to it was intolerable, but ultimately the peers backed down and allowed the remission to go through.

In 1871 the Commons passed a bill abolishing the practice of purchasing commissions in the army. Of course the peers opposed this reform, and rejected the bill by a majority of 25. Two days later the queen astonished the country and set all the Tories to gnashing their teeth by announcing the abolition of purchase by royal warrant, this action being taken upon the advice of Mr. Gladstone, prime minister.

The present ministry shows no disposition to re-introduce Mr. Birrell's education bill, but this recital of the precedents of the last century in a Conservative newspaper cannot be reassuring to the Lords and their friends in the present struggle with a large Liberal majority in the House of Commons.

Phineas Gardner Wright of Derby, Conn., erected a bust of himself in the cemetery and achieved some notoriety by having inscribed on the base the agnostic legend: "Going, but know not where." In the bust he appeared with his beard parted. In spite of his profession of ignorance regarding his destination he seems to have a sneaking hope of getting into heaven, for he had a dream that he couldn't do so with his beard in that shape and so had a sort of stone cutter-barber alter the cut of his whiskers. They appear now in a solid bunch. Probably he remembered hearing that there would be no parting there.

According to the figures of Senator Allison, chairman of the Senate committee on appropriations, the Fifty-ninth Congress in its two sessions nearly reached the two-billion dollar mark. The total for the session just concluded, available for th fiscal year ended, available for the fiscal year 1908, are $919,948,679.63. These include, of course, the annual appropriations and also the permanent appropriations which are not made in the annual bills. The second session's appropriations exceeded those of the first by $40,359,494.47, and the aggregate for the two sessions is $1,790,537,861.89.

The Fall River Trade and Industry Association, an organization of Fall River business men who are looking after the interests of that city, has appointed a committee to go to Boston and interview President Mellen in regard to the sale of the Sound steamboat lines. There is a fear that if Mr. Morse secures the lines they will be so managed as to be of less advantage for the development of Fall River's trade than at present. Is Newport, or are Newport business men, doing anything in this line? This city is interested in the matter, as well as Fall River.

Postmasters General Charles Emory Smith and George Cortelyou will secure legislation from Congress if they can, and if Congress refuses to act they will simply do by ukase what they couldn't obtain by statute. That is the way the President proceeded in regard to old age pensions and the re-organization of the Panama Commission.

Police Commissioner Bingham of New York has secured the passage by the state assembly of a bill which will allow him to run the police department as he wishes. This is the bill for opposition to which the police of New York raised a large sum of money. It now goes to the senate, where its fate is somewhat in doubt.

The next national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic will be held next summer in Saratoga. At the last encampment it was voted to meet in 1907 in Saratoga, but an attempt was made to change the place to Atlantic City, the executive committee, however, deciding against the change.

British Ambassador Bryce is now the popular selection for guest of honor at dinners. His first appearance at a public function outside of Washington will be at a reception in his honor by the New York Chamber of Commerce, March 26.

The Thaw trial has been full of surprises, but the announcement that the defense has closed is the greatest of all.

The illness of the President's son draws the hearts of the nation to the White House with sincere sympathy.

There is still a little winter left.

TO HARNESS THE ZAMBESI.

[Chicago News.]

"Preparations for harnessing the Victoria falls, on the Zambesi river, Africa, in the same way Niagara falls have been harnessed to electric dynamos are now being made," says an English correspondent. "The object of the new use of nature's force in Africa is to supply the Rand gold fields with electricity in bulk for lighting and power purposes at low prices. This great work will have to be carried out on new lines, because the distance between Victoria falls and the Rand, 600 miles, is greater than any over which the transmission of electricity has been attempted. Theoretically there is no limit to the distance over which power can be transmitted. In most cases, however, considerations such as configuration of the country and its obstruction to the erection of cables have to be taken into account. Between the falls and the Rand the country is practically level throughout, mostly uninhabited and containing no mountains to get over nor forests or swampy stretches to penetrate. The weather is equable, violent storms, blizzards and other natural visitations being quite unknown.

"The power-house in which the generating plant is to be installed will be located at the foot of the falls near the water's edge, 350 feet below the ledge over which the river plunges. The intake will consist of a small canal deviating from the river a short distance above the falls on the northern bank, and delivering at a convenient spot near the top of the gorge at the first or second bend of the river. The eminent engineers in charge of the work have also planned auxiliary means of transmission in case of a break-down at the falls. First, at the Rand end of the transmission line there will be a secondary hydraulic generating accumulator. Second, at Johannesburg there will be an emergency steam-turbine generating engine. The accumulator will have the capacity to provide current for 12 hours.

"At present nearly all the Rand mines are operated by steam engines, whose aggregate capacity is put at 281,099 horse-power. Many leading mining companies are ready to take electricity over the cable from Victoria falls, which will be strung from towers placed at intervals of 1,000 feet between there and Johannesburg."

A GUIDE TO THE BEST.

A globe-trotting journalist of renown has written a tourist catechism in a German paper in which he sets forth his observations on the countries and the people he has visited. His answer are ingenious, and they may be correct; but they would seem to convict him of being a Swede. We quote the following:

"Where do you find the most comfortable passenger trains?"

"In Russia."

"But where are they kept in the best condition?"

"In Sweden."

"Where is the railroad traffic managed with the least noise?"

"In England."

"Where do you find the best railroad restaurants?"

"In Sweden."

"Where are the most comfortable steamboats for longer voyages to be found?"

"In Germany and England."

"Where do you find the finest and best arranged steamboats for shorter trips?"

"In Sweden."

"Where the finest restaurants and cafes for moderate prices?"

"In Copenhagen and Stockholm."

"Where are the best automatic restaurants?"

"In Stockholm."

"Where the worst quick lunches?"

"In America, particularly in Boston."

"Where are the finest bath houses?"

"In Germany, Austria and Sweden."

"Where do you find the truest politeness and dignity among the people generally?"

"In Sweden, particularly in Stockhold."

"Where the opposite?"

"In Italy."

"Where do you find the most polite and well bred children?"

"In Sweden, Norway and Denmark."

"Where the opposite?"

"In Italy, Little Italy, but particularly in South Boston."

"Where do the young men have the finest figure and the handsomest features?"

"In Italy and Sweden, particularly in Stockholm."

"Where are the handsomest women?"

This question the writer, who appears to have gained some experience of life, does not answer.

Price of Ice to be High in Providence Next Summer.

State Medical Society Favors Home for Feeble-Minded—Almost a Fire Panic.

Although so, far as can be learned there is not an ice company doing business in the vicinity of Providence which has not cut a full and normal supply of first-grade ice sufficient to stock all the storage houses, it is announced by an official of the Providence Ice Company that ice will be high during the coming summer. According to what he says the present rate of 42 cents a week for a 12-pound piece of the commodity daily will be maintained throughout the summer season. If his statement correctly reflects the situation so far as the intentions of other ice companies are concerned, and the other companies follow the lead of the Providence company, it is believed that the present rates will be generally observed. Two years ago, and for several years previous to that time, the uniform rate for household supply for a week was 35 cents for a 12-pound piece daily. Last year, when the conditions were abnormal on account of the spring-like winter, the price for the same service was advanced to 70 cents per week. The present scale was adopted and put into effect January 1, 1907, even before the winter's cutting began. The statement of the Providence Ice Company official, it is thought, will be somewhat of a surprise to many people who have figured upon a reduction, for the coming summer at least, to the schedule in force two years ago, on account of the great amount of ice which has been harvested by the companies thus far this winter.

A resolution favoring the building of a state home for feeble-minded children was adopted at the quarterly meeting of the Rhode Island Medical Society yesterday. This action, which was first taken at a preliminary meeting of the House of Delegates, recognized the fact that there are a sufficient number of feeble-minded children in the state to warrant the establishment of a school for them at the expense of the state. On account of the absence of the president, Dr. Christopher P. Barker of this city, the meetings were presided over by Dr. Charles V. Chapin of Providence. The action regarding the home for the feeble-minded was the only action taken outside of the reading of three papers. These were: "A Case of Syringomyelia," Dr. Eugene Kingman; "Blood Pressure," Dr. Robert F. Noyes; "The Relationship Between Aphasia and General Disturbance," Dr. William McDonald, Jr. The reading of each paper was followed by an interesting discussion. Lunch was served at the close. There were about 50 persons present.

A slight fire in waste paper in the Industrial Trust building annex in Providence alarmed 300 people, who were enjoying the dance of the Mayflower Lodge in Palestine Hall last evening. But for the presence of mind of several men who were in attendance, a panic might have resulted. The first signs of the fire were noticed when a thin wreath of smoke made its way into the hall. This was ascribed to the heating apparatus, and none of the dancers were disturbed. It became thicker and thicker, however. Many of the women began to be frightened, and the men started on a tour of investigation. They found that a basket of waste paper in the room directly under the hall was burning briskly, and the woodwork was beginning to ignite. One of them notified the janitor, who telephoned and hose and hook and ladder companies responded. They extinguished the blaze without material damage.

On the very day set by the overseer of the poor for her removal to the almshouse death intervened yesterday to save Mrs. Ann Miller, aged 55 years, of Providence, from an event which she looked upon as a disgrace to herself. She was found dead by the men sent by Overseer of the Poor Cummings to remove her to an institution where better treatment for the illness from which she had been a sufferer for some time might be obtained. The dread of being taken to the almshouse had been worrying Mrs. Miller, who was a widow, for the past month. Too ill for the greater part of the time to leave her bed, she steadfastly held that she would soon be well again, and absolutely refused to accede to Mr. Cummings's request that she permit herself to be taken to the almshouse. Yesterday, however, was set by Mr. Cummings as the date on which Mrs. Miller, for her own good as well as the public health, should be taken from the squalid little room which served as her tenement to the superior accommodation of the almshouse. When the men peered into the room where Mrs. Miller lay, an apartment so dark that it was next to impossible to see anything within, not a sound was heard from the woman. After a time they groped their way to the wretched bed and found her dead.

THE MICROBE OF WHOOPING COUGH.

[Birmingham Weekly Post.]

In the last 20 years the microbe of whooping cough has been the subject of inquiry and of contradiction; a very large number of micro-organisms having been assigned the undesirable distinction of causing this extremely infectious malady. MM. Bordet and Gengou contribute to the annals of the Pasteur Institute a paper which conclusively disposes of all pre-existing claims, and assigns the part of disease-producer to the real criminal.

This micro-organism, they disinterred from the depths of the bronchial tubes, where it can lie dormant, and produce its maleficent effects without danger of expulsion by an ordinary cough. It is a bacillus of an ovoid shape, more or less elongated, and sometimes not unlike a micrococcus in appearance, though in general fairly constant in shape. They have made cultures of the micro-organism and they find that it cannot be agglutinated by the serum of ordinary persons, or by those who have had whooping cough at a remote period. The serum of children recently recovered from the malady has, however, a moderately agglutinating effect on the colonies of the microbe, so that there is some prospect of finding at some time or other an antidote against the infection.

ANIMALS' TOILET.

Cats, large and small, make the most careful toilet of any class of animal, excepting some of the opossums. The lions and tigers wash themselves in exactly the same manner as the cat, wetting the lark india rubber-like ball of the forefoot and inner toe, and passing it over the face and behind the ears. The foot is thus at the same time a face sponge and brush, and the rough tongue combs the rest of the body. Hares also use their feet to wash their faces, and the hare's foot is so suitable for the brush that it is used to apply the "paint" to the face for the stage.

CONTROL WON BY THE LEFT PARTY

Radicals Elect Vice Presidents in the Douma.

Bitter Debate Over Question of Amnesty.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 8.—The first skirmish for control of the opposition in the lower House of Parliament was won today by the radicals, who compelled the Constitutional Democrats to abandon their candidates for vice presidents and accept the nominees of the radical coalition. Until late in the afternoon the house was occupied with the elections of the vice presidents, the secretary and the latter's four assistants.

The procedure was tedious, the deputies in turn ascending the tribune to deposit the black or white balls in the ballot boxes. At the end of three hours the elections were announced M. Borezin of Suratov, a newspaper man and a member of the Group of Toil, received 345 votes for first vice president, to 161 votes cast for his opponent, and M. Pesnasky, of Kharkoff, a lawyer and member of the Left party, received 349 votes for second vice president, against 97 for his opponent. Professor Kapoustine of Kazan University, the Octobarist leader, was among the defeated candidates. This double victory for the Lefts was loudly cheered.

M. Chebokoff, Constitutional Democrat of Moscow, was elected secretary of the house.

Towards the close of the session the question of amnesty to political prisoners precipitated an acrimonious controversy, which, however, was fought out between the factions of the Left and did not reach the floor of the house.

The Social Democrats finally asked President Galovin for recognition, immediately after the elections of officers of the house were finished, for the purpose of moving the following resolution:

"The Douma cannot refrain from expressing gratitude at the solidity of the fighters for political liberty, now prisoners in the hands of the enemy, thanks to whom the Douma exists. We refrain from demanding amnesty, realizing that no other force than the people in revolution is able to release them."

The Social Revolutions, members of the Group of Toil, and Constitutional Democrats united against the resolution, fearing the storm which would be caused amon gthe reactionaries if it was introduced, and the Social Democrats ultimately withdrew it, but the most bitter spirit prevailed.

GALAHADS LOSE TO TIGERS.

The Galahad team went to the armory last evening and played the Tigers, losing 13 to 24, but putting up a good article of basket ball. The Galahad team was without Curtis, one of the forwards, but the substitute played well and the team as a whole gave a good exhibition of the game. The Tigers also played well and cleanly. Fludder of Galahad played a strong game against Carlisle, holding that exceedingly active player down to 2 baskets. The line-up follows:

Tigers.	Galahad.
Brack l. f.	l. f. Gibson.
Carlisle r. f.	r. f. C. H. Allen.
Briggs, c.	c., H. Allen.
Voigt l. b.	l. b. Fludder.
Faerber r. b.	r. b. Wrenquist.

Score—Tigers 24; Galahad 13. Baskets—Brack 5, Carlisle 2, Voigt 1, Faerber 3; Gibson 2, H. Allen 3, Wrenquist 1. From fouls—Carlisle 2; Gibson 1. Referee—McMahon. Time—20 and 15 minutes.

The crack team of the Seventeenth Separate Company of Flushing, N. Y., will play the Holy Name this evening and a fast contest may be expected. The visitors will be obliged to catch the boat to return to New York after the game. This is the only big game this week and with the good showing the Holy Name team has made in recent games a large attendance is looked for.

The Company G team of Gloversville, N. Y., recognized in the basket ball world as the "greatest ever," will play the Naval Reserves two games next week, and judging from the last contest between these teams the local enthusiasts have a great treat in store for them. The Company G team has yet to meet a defeat, and has played all the prominent teams in the East, and found but little trouble in winning; in fact, the recent game with the Reserves was the closest it has played this season, the score being 23 to 18. Captain McMahon and Shea of the Reserves' team, both of whom have been out of the game on account of injuries, are fast rounding into condition and with the others in fine form the team feels that it will make an even better showing than in the last game.

"COMING THRO' THE RYE" AGAIN.

The same company which was seen here recently in "Coming Thro' the Rye" will present the musical comedy on its return engagement. It includes Frank Lalor as Nott, the tailor; Stella Mayhew, as the funny Mrs. Cobb, a newly-rich Newport widow; Alma Youlin, soprano; John Park, as the artist; Frank Doane, an original Englishman; Billee Taylor, whose song, "I Think I'll Take the Train Back Home," scored heavily; William Riley Hatch, Florence Townsend, and Bessie Gibson, "the girl with the white horse," together with the chorus of 60. The stage production, however, will be almost a new one on its return, as during the present engagement in New York the scenery and costumes are being overhauled and some new ensemble numbers are being re-dressed entirely.

"THE COLLEEN BAWN."

"The Colleen Bawn," which will be given at the Opera House this month under the auspices of the St. Joseph Dramatic Club, is perhaps the most finished from a literary standpoint, and certainly the most successful, of the many plays given to the stage by the fertile pen of Boucicault. The play is unique, in a way, inasmuch as it deals with no political history, but is essentially a heart story in which comedy and dramatic situations are mingled throughout the action in a manner which sustains the interest.

The dramatic club is fortunate in having a large membership from which to select a cast of characters, and it has been the aim of those in charge of the entertainment to fill each part, no matter how small, with a person qualified by experience and competency to add to the artistic success of the production, and those who have seen the rehearsals say this purpose has been successfully carried out.

The play will be presented for the benefit of the building fund of St. Joseph Church and it is said that the advance sale of tickets is already large.

EARLE SIMMONS WITH THE HILLMAN COMPANY

The Maude Hillman Company, which will appear at the Opera House next week in a repertoire of popular plays, is one of the largest stock companies playing regularly over the Eastern circuit, where Miss Hillman has an enviable reputation as leading woman. She is especially strong in emotional roles, and inherits her talents naturally, as she comes from a family of actors. Her father was a noted character actor of the old school, and her mother was at one time a member of the old Boston Museum Stock Company, which has turned out more present-day representative American actors than any other similar company ever organized. She is supported by a company including Earle C. Simmons, a Newporter who is well known to the theatre-going public. The opening bill will be "Marching Through Georgia."

HEARING ON STATE MILITIA BILL.

The house committee on militia gave a hearing yesterday, on the bill to reorganize the state militia on the basis of the regular United States army standard and change the name from the Brigade of Rhode Island Militia to the National Guard of Rhode Island. Simultaneously the committee heard parties interested in the bills to appropriate $6,000 for the armory of the Newport Artillery Company and $1,000 for the United Train of Artillery of Providence.

Adjutant General Sackett and Quartermaster General Walker appeared before the committee and explained the necessity which made it incumbent on the state to conform its militia organization to the regular army standard in order that the state might continue to receive approximately $16,000 annually from the government, which the Dick bill allows.

The same officers also favored the appropriation of $6,000 for the new armory of the Newport Artillery Company, $12,000 of the cost of which has been raised by subscription.

Colonel Randolph A. Green of the United Train of Artillery appeared before the committee in advocacy of the bill appropriating $1,000 for repairs to the armory of that organization. The committee took all the matters under consideration.

MEMBERS' NIGHT AT Y. M. C. A.

About 60 members were present at the entertainment in the Young Men's Christian Association gymnasium last evening. The selections by members of the Glee Club proved popular and the illustrated songs by Ralph P. Rogers were well received. Mr. Crompton recited the humorous poem, "Betty and the Bar," and made quite a hit. The popular Christmas story of Dickens, "The Cricket on the Hearth," was told by Mr. Dadman and was listened to with the closest attention.

Following the formal program, it was voted to give a minstrel show in the near future. After light refreshments were served, the members enjoyed an old-fashioned sing of college songs.

A strong musical program will be presented at the Sunday men's meeting, at which Rev. Dr. Porter will speak. Not only will Mr. Rogers sing, but it is expected that a soprano from Boston will render selections.

JAMESTOWN.

(Regular correspondence of the News.)

The paymaster and clerk yesterday paid their monthly visit to pay off the garrison at Fort Greble.

Steamer Kennebec was late this morning in arriving from New York, being delayed by a heavy shipment of freight.

The quartermaster at Fort Greble has asked for bids to furnish transportation by ferry from the post to Newport, Jamestown, Saunderstown and Fort Adams for the ensuing year.

Mr. Thomas Robinson has returned to his home on Narragansett avenue from Providence, where he has been employed.

Today's snow has covered up the icy places in the roads and on the sidewalks, and walking is thereby made dangerous.

Miss Annie Smith of Newport is guest of Mr and Mrs. G. L. Barber on winsor street.

Although there is promise of opposition in the coming town meeting, which is only a month away, little or no open work is being done by either faction.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

—A. O'D. Taylor has again rented for Mrs. Nicholas Dillon, her house at 29 Mann avenue, corner of Mt. Vernon street, to Frank M. Greenlaw.

—Rev. C. J. Wigren, presiding elder of Boston District, Eastern Swedish Conference, will hold the fourth Quarterly Conference in the Swedish Methodist Episcopal Church this evening.

—Louis P. Well of New Haven, F. J. Schmidt of Annapolis, P. Sexton of Brooklyn, R. P. Lyon and J. W. Miller of Boston and John P. Canning of Perth Amboy are registered at the Perry House.

—Two barges anchored near the Lime Rocks broke their anchor chain yesterday afternoon and drifted to Brown & Howard's and Dugan's docks, where they brought up without serious damage to any other craft.

—Mr. George Peck lost a valuable carriage horse this morning. It had been to a blacksmith's to be shod and was being led back to the stable, when it slipped on the ice and broke one of the small bones of a leg. It was necessary to kill the animal.

—Mrs. Mary-Kelly, who died in Pawtucket yesterday, formerly resided at the Coal Mines in Portsmouth and had many friends in this vicinity. She leaves a brother and two sisters, one sister being Mrs. John Dunn of this city and the other residing in Pawtucket.

—There was a musical and literary entertainment at the Naval Training Station last night for the pleasure of the apprentice seamen. There was instrumental music by Musician Coon of the Station band, songs and refreshments. Many of the officers and their wives were present.

—Major Ormond M. Lissak, formerly attached to the artillery corps and now an officer of the ordnance department of the army, has been detailed for duty as professor of ordnance and science of gunnery at the Military Academy, West Point. Major Lissak has been on duty as an instructor in this department at West Point since 1904 and is now promoted to a full professorship.

—At a meeting of the Newport Yacht Club last evening it was voted to join the Narragansett Yacht Racing Association. There was also a vote on the matter of having a gasoline tank near the clubhouse, for the accommodation of motor boat owners. Estimates will now be in order for supplying the kind of tank wanted. No money has yet been voted for the purchase of a tank.

—The Arnold house on Rhode Island avenue, now the property of Mrs. Mary H. Horgan, has been cut in two, and both sections are being removed to a new site of 14,000 square feet on the west side of Hunter avenue, where the buildings will be altered into two cottages. The larger has been leased for a term of years to Mr. A. O'D. Taylor, whose family will remove there in May from their present residence on Francis street.

and uttered in a low voice the three words: "The defense rests."

Mr. Jerome then said he would have to ask for an adjournment of the case until Monday morning.

"When court adjourned last Wednesday evening," he said, "I had no reason to expect other than that I would be confronted this morning by experts who would be called upon to answer a hypothetical question which Mr. Delmas was to frame extemporaneously. Yesterday evening however, Mr. McPike called upon me with a letter from Mr. Delmas, saying the defense had changed its plans and would call no more witnesses.

"Under the circumstances, I must ask for an adjournment, as I have no witness available today. My experience with hypothetical questions framed extemporaneously has been that they require a long time in the asking, and are subject to more or less discussion. I had expected the putting of these questions would require all of today's session."

Justice Fitzgerald turned to Mr. Delmas, who said: "There is not the slightest objection on our part."

Justice Fitzgerald then ordered the adjournment until Monday admonishing the jurors not to discuss the case with any one or among themselves, and above all not to read the newspapers.

Mr. Jerome said he was not prepared today to add anything further to his statement of last night that the evidence he will have to offer in rebuttal will be before the jury by Wednesday evening. He added that the case should go to the jury by Friday next.

Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw was in the witness room today, and when court adjourned she immediately went to the Tombs to visit her husband.

Thaw was greatly disappointed by the delay in the progress of his trial, and commented upon it in his talk with his wife after the adjournment of court today. After a long chat with her he accepted the delay with better patience.

It was reported around the criminal court building after the trial had been adjourned that Mrs. Evelyn Thaw had been subpoenaed by District Attorney Jerome to appear as a witness for the prosecution in rebuttal. No verification of the report could be obtained, however. The district attorney's office refused to confirm or deny the story.

It is said Mr. Jerome's object in summoning Evelyn Thaw as a witness in rebuttal is to extract from her if possible information concerning the letters Stanford White wrote her. The subpoena is said to call for the production of any such letters Mrs. Thaw may have in her possession. She already has declared that she has none, he last 14 received by her having been turned over to her husband, who gave them to Mr. Hartridge.

May MacKenzie was notified today to be on hand Monday, subject to the call of the prosecutor. Mrs. J. J. Cline has also been subpoenaed by the district attorney.

MORE SNOW.

Yesterday, have seemed to some that the snow this morning filled a long felt want, but to the majority of the citizens of Newport it was a disagreeable surprise to see "the beautiful" dropping in abundant flakes at an early hour. It had about ceased by 2 o'clock. The latter stages were in the melting mood, for the temperature rose, and much of the snow melted as it fell. There was something done in the way of clearing sidewalks, but the snow was not enough to set the highway department at work.

THE RUSSIAN DOUMA.

At present the Douma consists of 195 members: 29 more are yet to be chosen. These are roughly divided into Right, Centre and Left. The Right comprises 90 Monarchists, or Reactionaries, and 36 Octoberists, or Moderates—126 in all, or a trifle more than one fourth of the whole. In the Centre are the 92 Constitutional Democrats, 13 Poles and 29 Progressives—134 in all, or a fraction less than one third of the Douma. In the Left are the Socialists, the Revolutionists and the Group of Toil, numbering 192, or nearly 40 per cent. Besides, there are 15 Independents, or unattached members. It will thus be seen that the Left is decidedly the strongest of the three groups, while the Constitutional Democrats are probably a little more numerous than any other single party.

AMEER ENJOYS BOXING.

Of all the devices adopted by the English government to entertain the ruler of Afghanistan during his visit to India, which is costing the national treasury the trifling sum of $1,000,000, the one which seems to have been the most successful of all has been the boxing contests, and at his request matches of this kind occur almost daily for his entertainment. Banquets, state functions, reviews and even sham battles have ended by boring him. But he never tires of a hotly contested encounter with gloves, and his interest and delight in the noble art of self-defense peculiar to the English speaking races are unbounded.

The Ameer is by no means the only Oriental monarch entertained by the British sovereign who has manifested tastes of this particular character. The old Nasr-ed-Din, grandfather and predecessor of the present Shah of Persia, was so worked up about boxing on the occasion of his first stay in England that nothing would satisfy him but a full fledged prize fight; that is to say, a real one, with bare knuckles and blood. With many precautions an encounter of this kind was arranged for his edification by the officials charged with its amusement, and it took place in the stables of Buckingham palace. Unfortunately, the Shah was lamentably deficient in that virtue of punctuality which is inappropriately described as "the politeness of kings," and he came down to the stables late, with the result that the prize fight overlapped an appointment which had been made for the late Lord Shaftesbury, the Archbishops of Canterbury and of York, and a delegation of bishops, to plead before him the cause of Christian missions in the land of Iran.

They came at the appointed hour and were conducted by officials, unaware of what was in progress in the royal stables, to the Shah's presence there. The prelates, horror struck by the spectacle presented to their pious eyes, retreated precipitately, followed by old Lord Shaftesbury, but before he had given vent to his indignation in a loud tone of voice, and protested that he would denounce "the horrid scandal all over the kingdom." It was only with the utmost difficulty that he was eventually appeased. It did not, however, interfere with the enjoyment of the Shah, who could not be brought to understand the objection of his visitors to a spectacle which he considered so delectable. In fact, he could never understand Western squeamishness, and was disposed to regard it as an unintelligible discourtesy when the English authorities refused to hang a man just in order to show him how the gallows worked and the trap door was sprung.

MEN WHO LOOK ALIKE.

Facial Resemblance of People in Washington Public Life the Cause of Much Comment.

[Washington Star.]

Striking facial resemblances of men in public life and in official circles in this city are frequently commented upon. There are three men widely known whose similarity of face and form is so striking that queer mistakes of identity are experienced every now and then. The resemblance of the President to his distinguished Secretary of the Navy and Attorney General, Mr. Moody, has always been the subject of remark and now and then of humorous mistakes. Now that Mr. Moody has been elevated, or at least transferred to the Supreme Court of the United States, he has come across another double in the person of Mr. James Maher, clerk of the Supreme Court.

When Mr. Justice Moody first met Mr. Maher it was as a member of the House of Representatives when the resemblance between the two was remarked. Again, when as Attorney General he had occasion to go to the court room, he occasionally saw his double, and now as a justice on the bench he can look over the edge of his judicial gown any time and practically see himself as others see him. Mr. Maher's resemblance to the President is striking when in repose, but when he speaks or smiles he is obliged to acknowledge that owing either to the subduing atmosphere of the court or to the lack of dental qualifications he cannot vie with the chief executive at the other end of the avenue.

The resemblance of Senators Aldrich and Foraker is also striking, although the distinguished senator from Rhode Island plays the role of a reticent general manoeuvring his forces on the floor of the Senate, while the Senator from Ohio acts the more striking part of a dashing officer with standard uplifted ready for the fray, regardless of the distribution of forces. If Mr. Foraker's well-covered head were matched by the hirsute adornment of Mr. Aldrich the resemblance would be complete. But standing side by side they appear as brothers and their similarity is frequently commented upon.

Now and then Representative Adin B. Capron of Rhode Island wanders over to the Senate end of the Capitol, and whenever he does so he gives a shock to some one, who, upon seeing him, is startled at his striking resemblance to the late Senator Quay of Pennsylvania. He is more robust in appearance than his prototype from Pennsylvania and much younger. But the resemblance was always striking, and when Senator Quay was living and in the Senate with Mr. Capron in the House they often indulged in stories of mistaken identity.

Two Senators stand as competitors in the degree of their resemblance to the pictures of a widely-advertised doctor, the virtue of whose remedies are announced in the public print in connection with a picture of the doctor in an attitude of attention with uplifted hand admonishing the sick. These senators are Clay of Georgia and La Follette of Wisconsin. They are enough alike to be brothers were it not for the fact that one is of the most generous build while the other is below the average height. Both wear their hair pompadour and both can defy the Senate when they make up their minds to do so.

Senator La Follette was recently passing through the marble room when a Philadelphian nudged a friend at his side and remarked:

"I wonder if Dr. —— is here in the interest of the pure food law."

He had not before seen the Wisconsin Senator.

Senator Carter of Montana and Representative Livingston are rivals in the role of replicas of Uncle Sam. When Livingston went to Venezuela some years ago to observe conditions there he was warmly received by the people who knew the United States chiefly by having seen pictures of Uncle Sam. When they saw Livingston they declared that he was Uncle Sam personified, and some of them believed him to be the owner of the United States. Either Carter or Livingston could pass anywhere as the prototype of the typical Uncle Sam without adding any stage paraphernalia.

The likeness between Senator Cullom and Speaker Cannon is also frequently remarked, and Mr. Cullom's resemblance to the venerated Lincoln has been commented upon ever since the two knew each other in the stirring days of the war. Lincoln and Cullom each had a warm place in his heart for the other, and Cullom was always a strong supporter of the great emancipator in the days when even the popularity and fame of Lincoln were far from being assured.

Representative Lacey and the late Senator Alger were strikingly alike. Whenever Mr. Lacey visited the Senate and sat on the divans at the rear of the chamber back of the desk of the Michigan Senator the resemblance between the two was remarked by people in the galleries.

Since Senator DuPont of Delaware, the head of the great powder company, took the oath of office he has been mistaken on many occasions for Admiral Schley. Not long ago his right to the floor was questioned by some visitors, who declared that they knew no reason why Admiral Schley should be on the floor, and they finally accounted for his presence there because of his having received by mail the thanks of Congress. Later they learned their mistake.

FINDING WORLD'S LARGEST DIAMOND.

[W. G. Fitzgerald in American Magazine.]

A solitary man was walking across the veldt, intending to climb down into "No. 2 Workings." This was Captain Frederick Wells, the mine manager. For a moment he stood on the brink, looking down at the tangled chaos of earthheaps, criss-crossed with trolley tracks and steel trucks, like children's toys. The man was listless and tired, for it had been a burning day in a country where water is most precious. Wells took off his hat on the high level, drew a long breadth or two, planted his right foot firmly and began the descent of the bank. He went down sidewise and when less than half way his eye suddenly caught a glassy gleam from a large stone three parts embedded in the soil. To lay hands upon it and wrench it from its matrix was the work of a moment.

And when he had done this the man's judgment told him he held in his hand the greatest diamond the world ever saw, or probably will ever see again—a colossal crystal of 3,024¾ carats—1.37 pounds avoirdupois! Like a man in a dream, Wells squatted down precariously on the steep, loose bank and wondered whether, after all, it was but a fantastic dream, born of much zeal as manager and a steady succession of large finds.

The record stone was not, as might be supposed, sent to Europe in a ship of its own. So prosaic is the civilized commerce of today that this vast treasure was merely sealed up in a tin box, registered as a "postal packet" and sent through the mails as though it were a worthless geological specimen! It was received at the London office of the Premier Diamond Mining Company, Ltd., and measures were taken at once to insure it for about half its approximate value—say, $2,500,000.

RULES CONCERNING MARRIAGES.

Neither the princes nor princesses of the royal family can contract any valid marriage without the sanction of the king. Any member of the reigning house who, after obtaining permission of the king, contracts a marriage with a person of non-royal or bourgeois birth is compelled before the ceremony to renounce in the presence of the king, of the prime minister, of the president of the legislature, of the president of the council of state and of the ministers of justice and of war all rights, prerogatives and immunities as a scion of the royal family. The king may allow the member of his family entering upon a matrimonial alliance of this kind to retain the title borne until then, but on the understanding that under no circumstances is it to be used either by the other partner to the union or by the children born thereof.

ENJOY EATING.

Good Digestion Can be Readily Gained with Mi-o-na Stomach Tablets.

It is torment to look upon a tempting dinner and realize that to eat freely means distress and suffering.

Let us tell you how you can enjoy eating, so that the heartiest meals will set well and cause no pain, distress or uncomfortable feeling of fullness.

If you cannot eat and enjoy three good, hearty, satisfying meals a day without any feeling of discomfort, your stomach is weak and needs the strength which Mi-o-na stomach tablets will give it. You cannot afford to delay treatment, for the longer you allow the digestive organ to be weak, the harder it will be to get help.

The remarkable curative and strengthening power of Mi-o-na is attested by the guarantee, which Wright & Hay give with every 50c. box. "We return the money if Mi-o-na fails to cure."

If you find that eating well-cooked and properly chewed food is followed by heaviness and load on the stomach, by bloating, by gulping of acids and wind, by distress, nervousness, headache, trouble to sleep, or by any other symptoms of disordered or weak stomach, you should begin the use of Mi-o-na at once. It is guaranteed by one of the best known druggists in Newport to cure all disorders of the stomach, or cost nothing. A guarantee like this means a good deal.

Perkins Repays New York Life Campaign Contribution.

NEW YORK, March 7.—George W. Perkins, former first vice president of the New York Life Insurance Company, and now a member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., has sent to the New York Life his personal check for $54,019.19, to reimburse the company for the Republican campaign contributions made from its funds in 1904, in connection with which Mr. Perkins was recently made defendant on a charge of larceny.

Announcement of the restitution of the principal of $48,500 and interest to date was made today by President Alexander E. Orr of the New York Life, to whom Mr. Perkins yesterday, before leaving on a trip to the South, addressed a letter inclosing the check. President Orr also gave out a letter he received from Mr. Perkins which explains itself. It is as follows:

"In 1904 at the request of the then president of the company, I advanced $48,500 as a payment on behalf of the New York Life Insurance Company to the Republican national campaign committee. I did this with the understanding with the president that I should be reimbursed by the company. Subsequently I was so reimbursed. The payment was made without any thought on the part of the president or myself of personal advantage, but solely in the belief that it was for the best and broadest interests of the policy holders both at home and abroad.

"In dismissing the criminal proceedings instituted against me for accepting reimbursement, the courts have intimated that the payment, and therefore the reimbursement, was not for a proper corporate purpose. I therefore return to the company the amount of money paid by it to me, inclosing herewith my check for $54,019.19 to cover principal and interest."

WHO ARE THE ILLITERATE?

[Lewiston Journal.]

Ninety thousand Indians now have the ballot among the five civilized tribes. It is to be hoped that some time women will be sufficiently civilized so that they can have the same rights at the ballot box that Indians, negroes and illiterate whites now have. But the chief reason why women don't have the ballot, as we have often urged, is that they don't want it, though a few women mightily want the ballot. The ballot belongs to all but the illiterate, the criminal and those deservedly pauperized in mind as well as in pocket. A learned man bribing voters with grog, with money or with promised office is the most illiterate of the whole lot, since an illiterate heart turns knowledge into a conspiracy.

THE BEST INSURANCE.

Is good health, for then you can work successfully for your own betterment and to the satisfaction of your employer.

If dyspepsia makes you feel dull, tired, incapable of sustained effort, if pains are continually distracting your mind from your occupation, if your breath makes you unapproachable, if you must belch gases, you must surely go backward.

Is it not good business sense and the best of insurance to use Dr. Richards Dyspepsia Tablets, which will cure you and destroy all these drawbacks?

Mrs. Martha Proctor of 16 Barber Ave., Central Falls, R. I. says.

"It gives me great pleasure to inform you and the public generally that Dr. Richards Dyspepsia Tablets have afforded me great relief. Some few weeks ago I procured a bottle of your tablets at Wood's Drug Store and took them strictly according to directions and after the first few doses I noticed an improvement. The Laxocanlits which accompany the tablets, I find to be the best laxative, (for they are so mild), that it has ever been my privilege of taking. I think you have a truly wonderful remedy and shall always recommend it."

For Sale by all druggists. Better say "Richards" twice. Price 50 cents per bottle. Made by Dr. Richards Dyspepsia Tablet Association, 53 Worth St., New York.

LITTLE BABY CURED OF ECZEMA

Parents Applied to Hospitals and Doctors but Could Get No Relief—Grew Worse Under Doctor's Prescription—Friends Recommended Cuticura—Result

A SPEEDY AND PERMANENT CURE

"We express to you herewith our best thanks for the cure of our baby from eczema. The eczema appeared when the child was three months old. We applied to several doctors and hospitals, each of which gave us something different every time, but nothing brought relief. A physician recommended a salve which we threw into the fire after two days' use as the eczema became worse so that the baby scratched his face. At last, one of our friends recommended to us Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. A few days afterwards improvement could be noted. Since then we have used nothing but Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, and now the baby is six months old and is quite cured. All that we used was one cake of Cuticura Soap and two boxes Cuticura Ointment, costing in all $1.25. Even the poorest man can pay that instead of throwing it into the doctor's lap. I myself only make twelve dollars a week as a teamster, but I recommend the Cuticura Remedies strongly to all mothers whose children suffer from such diseases. They are cheap, harmless and good. C. F. Kara and Wife, 343 East 65th Street, New York, March 30, 1906."

FOR SORE HANDS

Soak the hands on retiring, in a hot, creamy lather of Cuticura Soap. Dry and anoint freely with Cuticura Ointment, and in severe cases spread the Ointment on thin pieces of old linen or cotton. Wear during the night old, loose, kid gloves, with the finger ends cut off and holes cut in the palms, or a light bandage of old cotton.

Complete External and Internal Treatment for Every Humor of Infants, Children, and Adults consists of Cuticura Soap (25c.) to Cleanse the Skin, Cuticura Ointment (50c.) to Heal the Skin, and Cuticura Pills (Chocolate Coated, 25c. per vial of 60) to Purify the Blood. Sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston, Mass. Depots: London, Newbery, 27 Charterhouse Sq.; Paris, Roberts, 5 Rue de la Paix.

NEW YORK NEWS LETTER.

Dining in Mid-Air Coney Island's Next Marvel.

Wonderful Revolving Cafe 700 Feet High—The Metropolis Harbors 10,000 Crooks and Pickpockets.

(Correspondence of the News.)

NEW YORK, March 7.—"What will Coney do next?" is the perennial question with which New York's summer visitors greet some new marvel at that world-famous resort by the sea. And it always is a marvel. Dreamland and Luna Park have passed their first freshness, but this year the marvel will be there just the same. It will be a globular tower, the biggest building in the world, for which the first piece of steel was set in place a few days ago. The new building will be 700 feet high and 900 feet in circumference—bigger than the Hippodrome, Madison Square Garden, the Academy of Music, the Metropolitan Opera House and the New York Theatre combined. Beside it the Washington monument, the Bunker Hill monument, the Philadelphia city hall, the Park row building, and the Masonic Temple in Chicago will look like toys. It will have 11 floors and 500,000 square feet of floor space, and on every floor will be all sorts of things to amuse the millions who survive the crush incident to a five-cent fare to the island. The ground floor will be an automobile garage, together with various small concessions. Just 150 feet above the ground will be the pedestal roof garden, a popular-priced restaurant, vaudeville and roller-skating rink. At 250 feet will be the aerial hippodrome with a continuous four-ring circus, and a miniature railroad running around the circumference of the tower.

But the greatest feature of all will be the revolving restaurant and cafe, 300 feet in the air, which the leather-lunged barkers will proclaim the only one of the kind in the world. It will be 25 feet wide, with 500 tables and a seating capacity for 2,500 people at one time. In it one may eat and drink and watch the grand panorama of harbor and city and the background of wooded hills drift slowly before his vision in the 30 minutes it will take the cafe to complete its revolution, then pursue his way upward to the grand ball room, the scenic railway and various other novelties at the 350-foot level, the observatory platform fitted with telescopes at 500 feet, and the United States weather bureau and wireless telegraph station at 600 feet. There, if he has any breath left, he may look at the stars and stripes floating another hundred feet above him and exclaim: "What will Coney do next?"

Coleridge said: "When I think that every morning in Paris alone 30,000 fellows wake up and rise with the fixed and settled idea of appropriating other people's money, it is with renewed wonder that every night when I go home I find my purse still in my pocket." That, to be sure, was long enough ago to give the world a chance for improvement, but there is still room for the disquieting statement of Chief of Detectives McLaughlin that there are no less than 10,000 crooks and suspicious characters in the streets of New York. Every night the detective bureau brings in from 40 to 100 of these men who have police records, and the next morning the magistrates set most of them free because there is no way in which they may be detained under the law.

Pickpockets are the most prevalent type. Most of them are young men, many of them fairly well educated and of good appearance and all of them of the hardened sort, and it is freely charged that certain detective sergeants are giving immunity to well-known rogues whose names have recently graced the columns of the daily papers in connection with the charges. The New York pickpocket of the present day is credited with being about the slickest human being in the thieving fraternity. Diamonds and watches are religiously eschewed by the experts of the profession because of the risk of identification, but money is not so easily traced. Detective Sergeant Sheridan, who has been in charge of the record room at police headquarters for many years, says that the thoroughly up-to-date pickpocket has become so cautious and skillful that he always makes a practice of returning a rifled pocketbook to the victim's clothes, usually stuffed to its former proportions with paper.

Most of these light-fingered gentry received their training as street gamins, so Father Knickerbocker has come to the conclusion that the way to make good citizens is to catch 'em while they're very young, and start development in the right direction by surrounding the children of the city with better moral and physical conditions, more practical training and the opportunity to live healthy and clean lives without resort to the streets for exercise and amusement.

"What the City Owes to Its Boys" was the topic discussed at a recent meeting under the auspices of the board of education, at which George H. Martin, state secretary of education for Massachusetts, and Dr. Luther H. Gulick, director of physical training in the New York schools, maintained the chief debt to be suitable and ample playgrounds and a better sanitary system in school buildings, conditions which were realized long ago by the New York Juvenile Asylum and put into practice when that institution was removed from the city to Dobbs Ferry, where an admirable system of cottage homes and grounds aggregating several hundred acres in extent for work and play have been productive of results which have attracted marked attention from charitable and reform institutions all over the country.

A Chicago student of reform statistics has recently found that the average value to the community of 65 per cent of the boys paroled to that city from the State Reformatory is $500 per year each, at wages ranging from $20 to $100 per month, figures which have strongly suggested to local authorities the advisability of saving the other 35 per cent by adequate preventive measures.

It seems incredible that New Yorkers at home, with money in their pockets, should ever find more than a passing difficulty in answering the question: Where shall we eat? For homeless bachelors, however, such of them at least as like good, substantial American dishes, the problem is fast becoming a serious one. Time was, and not so long ago, when the answer to the question might have been found at a dozen different chop houses and restaurants where food had a home-like taste and the proprietor took some personal interest in his guests. Now Engel's, the last one of them, has been sold to make way for a bank. Martin, the best known of all, failed but a short time ago, and a "to let" sign in the window is one of the mournful sights of Broadway today. Old Tom's has given way to an office building; Seighortner moved away from Lafayette place years ago and died; Browne's moved away and changed its character; Pedro's is closed; Le Blanc's has given way to a building devoted to millinery.

Even the middle-class hotel has become almost extinct, borne down before the advance of trade. The New York Hotel, the old Metropolitan, and the St. Nicholas have gone, and the Sinclair is doomed soon to follow, leaving the field with practically no middle ground between the cheap lunch rooms on the one hand and the ornate lobster palaces, in which tiresome music and menus printed in unintelligible French are the apology for exorbitant charges and insolent service. In the various foreign quarters of the city there are restaurants which provide the favorite dishes of the fatherland, but for the men and women who were born and brought up in the United States, there is no place where they may expect to find and recognize the toothsome dishes of New England and the old South, or even the plain, substantial fare upon which the West grew to lusty manhood. In this respect, perhaps more than in any other, New York has ceased to be an American city.

New York has ever a warm welcome for the stranger within her gates. Hence when Charley Jackson of Billings, Montana, came to town about three weeks ago, with $300 in his pocket and a desire to see what might be done with it, he was promptly taken in hand and shown a few things which could not fail to interest, however little they may have pleased him. Before he left for home one day last week, he had accumulated the finest stock of experience that ever went West in a cattle train for lack of a Pullman ticket.

Charley's first night was spent at a hotel to which a friendly policeman referred him, where he awoke the next morning to find himself without even the price of an early morning cocktail. After kindly harboring him for three whole days in the hope that something might turn up, the management suggested that he move, without baggage, which they offered to retain until his bill was paid. Deeming it essential to eat, even if it should be found necessary to walk back to Montana, Charley sought honest employment, which he found at the business end of a long-handled shovel clearing the streets of snow. At the end of the eleventh hour he was rewarded with a ticket calling for $2.20. The ticket lacked the appearance of a satisfying meal, however, so he parted with it to a kindhearted speculator for $1.50, with which he made for a famous East Side hostelry. In his confiding, western way, Jackson pulled his shoes off before going to bed that night, which accounted for his appearance the next morning at the office of a charity organization in the second best pair of a friendly tramp. Here he exchanged a pedigree reaching all the way from New York to Montana and most of the way back to Adam for a lot of false hopes of employment.

His next landing was in a Front street office, where three days' assiduous application netted him an even $1.35. Then a coal yard "sanked" him 40 cents for a shovel and kindly offered him an opportunity to use it if he would furnish a bond not to steal the coal. Finally Jackson obtained a chance to convoy a lot of draught horses out to Montana and he took it quick. He says he has had a lot of fun here, but it will be a long time before he comes again.

Longacre.

SOME WAYS OF FALLING.

(Philadelphia Record.)

A visitor from another city here on a tour of inspection of the public schools came to a West Philadelphia school the other day when the pupils were writing original sentences on the blackboard, and found an opportunity to air his pet hobby of avoiding superfluity in the use of words. One boy had written, "The man suddenly fell down." "What is the need of the word 'down' in that sentence?" asked the visitor. "How else could the man fall?" "Over," promptly replied the boy who had written the sentence. "Backwards," suggested another. "Against a wall," volunteered a third; "upstairs," said still another. The visitor promptly gave up criticism and was silent during the remainder of his stay.

IN THE SENATE FOR LIFE.

Morgan and Pettus, from Alabama, to be Succeeded by Alternates Only in Case of Death.

No situation has ever been presented in politics quite like that which now surrounds the two Senatorships from Alabama. Senators Morgan and Pettus are very old men, and the legislature which has re-elected them has chosen two "alternates" to step into their shoes in case they die. It is equivalent, of course, to giving Messrs. Morgan and Pettus a life tenure of office, and designating the heirs. These heirs are ex-Governor Johnston and ex-Representative Bankhead. It is assumed that they will be Senators some day, but that is all that can be said.

Mr. Morgan is nearly 83 years old and Mr. Pettus is nearly 86. They are both active, vigorous and influential. The respect that is accorded them in the Senate is not due chiefly to their gray hairs, but to the intellectual ambience, almost pre-eminence, of Mr. Morgan and the solid attainments of Mr. Pettus.

Mr. Morgan is the most industrious worker in a Senate which is full of hard workers. Whenever he enters on one of his famous four-day talks to filibuster some proposition out of existence he never fails to fag out Senators who from his standpoint are mere youths of 50 or 60. At the end of these endurance trials Mr. Morgan is fresh and vigorous, though he has done all the work. Every day of his life Mr. Morgan performs an amount of work which seems prodigious to men half his age.

From the gallery Mr. Morgan looks older and feebler than Mr. Pettus. He is of slight and rather emaciated frame. Mr. Pettus has great shoulders and a broad chest, and must have been a man of enormous physical strength. Meet them at home or in the corridors, and the impression is reversed. Mr. Pettus, while still strong and vigorous and showing his age but slightly, yet shows it more than Mr. Morgan. Mr. Morgan's blue eye still glints and flashes with the same fire as when he led his cavalrymen to battle 42 years ago.

They are a remarkable pair, not in age alone. They constitute practically a third party in the Senate. The ideal of absolute independence of party has been reached by both of them. With a life tenure which nothing can disturb, they act on every question without regard to anything but their principles. They always vote alike, and only in name are they Democrats, for the dictates of the party are matters of absolute indifference to both.

Each question as it comes up they examine and decide by only one test—the test of their archaic principles. Nobody even labors with them to change an intention, nobody ever offers them inducements or suggests considerations of expediency, for it would be useless. Nobody even argues with them to amend their convictions, for there is no meeting ground. The convictions are the product of principles learned when the other Senators were boys, and there is no basis for argument. The world has moved on, and the very language in which those principles are expressed is foreign to the ears of this generation.

HAPPY WOMEN.

Wouldn't any woman be happy,
After years of backache suffering,
Days of misery, nights of unrest,
The distress of urinary troubles,
To find relief and cure?
No reason why any reader
Should suffer in the face of evidence like this:

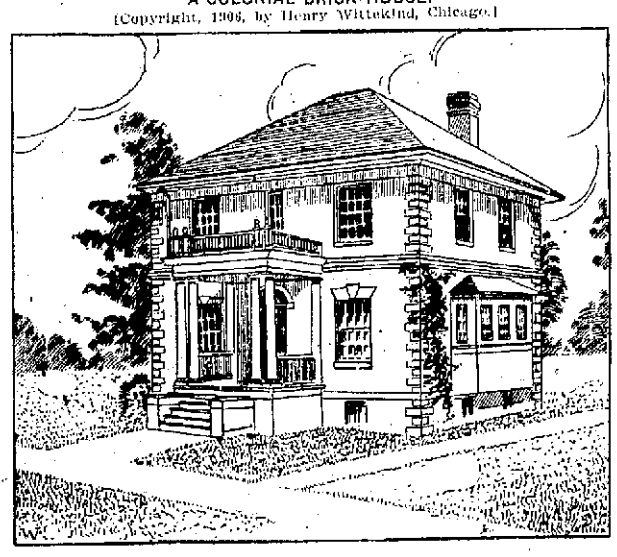

Mrs. Almira A. Jackson, of East Front St., Traverse City, Mich., says. "For twenty years I was doctoring for kidney and liver trouble, but without benefit. Just before I began using Doan's Kidney Pills I was almost paralyzed. I could hardly stand on my feet because of the numbness and lack of circulation. Had a knife been thrust into my kidneys the pain could not have been more intense. My sleep was disturbed by visions of distorted figures. The kidney secretions were annoyingly irregular, and I was tortured with thirst and always bloated. I used seven boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills. The bloating subsided until I weighed 100 pounds less, could sleep like a child and was relieved of the pain and the irregularity of the kidney action. My circulation is good and I feel better in every way."

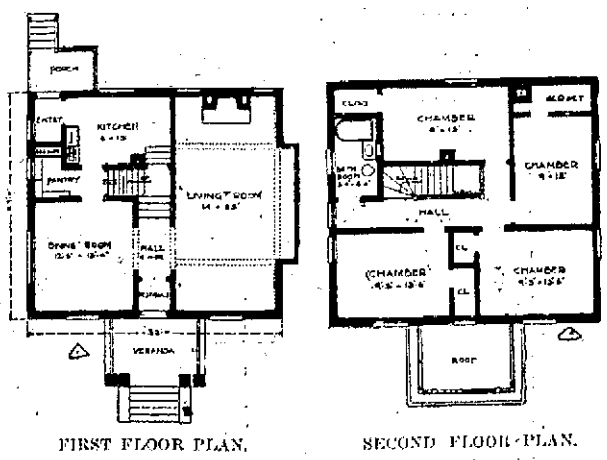

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Jackson will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists; price, 50 cents per box.

A COLONIAL BRICK HOUSE.

PERSPECTIVE VIEW.

FIRST FLOOR PLAN. SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

The exterior of this house is colonial, brick veneered with brick quoins at the corners. The first floor contains a living room with exposure on three sides, open fireplace, beamed ceiling and wood cornice. The dining room has a wood cornice and plate shelf. There are four bedrooms and a bath on the second floor. The stairs are combination front and rear. The interior finish should be of Georgia pine, stained and varnished in the living room, hall and dining room. The woodwork in the other rooms should be finished in the natural wood.

Catarrh

To prove unquestionably, and beyond any doubt, that Catarrh of the nose and throat can be cured, I am furnishing patients through druggists, small free Trial Boxes of Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Cure. I do this because I am so certain, that Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Cure will bring actual substantial help. Nothing certainly, is so convincing as a physical test of any article of real, genuine merit. But that article must possess true merit, else the test will condemn, rather than advance it. Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Cure is a snow white, healing antiseptic balm, put up in beautiful nickel capped glass jars at 25c. Such soothing agents as Oil Eucalyptus, Thymol, Menthol, etc., are incorporated into a velvety, cream like Petrolatum, imported by Dr. Shoop from Europe. If Catarrh of the nose and throat has extended to the stomach, then by all means also use internally, Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Stomach distress, a lack of general strength, bloating, belching, biliousness, bad taste, etc., surely call for Dr. Shoop's Restorative.

For uncomplicated catarrh only of the nose and throat nothing else, however, need be used but

ARITHMETIC IN THE SCHOOLS

Doubtful if Pupils Can Cipher as Well Now as Formerly.

Ease and Rapidity in Computing More Important Than Theory for Young Children.

[Correspondence of the News.]

Before proceeding to discuss the question of the arithmetical ability of the school children of today, it may be well to say a word more about the spelling book, in a conversation with a gentleman who is deeply interested in the schools of this city, the writer learned the following facts:

The idea that in schools in which a large part of the work is written the spelling book can be dispensed with is not a new one. It was entertained and acted upon years ago by one of the most distinguished educators of the period. The spelling books were banished from all the schools of one of our cities and were not used again in those schools until several years after they had come under the charge of another superintendent. The latter gave as his reason for reintroducing them the failure of some of the teachers to do passably good work without them. From some cause or other, these teachers did not exercise that "eternal vigilance" which is the price of success in the carrying out of any scientific method. So the spelling books were put in again and have stayed in ever since.

But the wisdom of this step may well be questioned. In the first of these articles mention was made of the writer's recently assisting in the correction of nearly 200 compositions by pupils in the first year of the high school in a certain city. They averaged bad—some of them were simply atrocious—and poor spelling was as conspicuous as any of the other bad features. This was the very same city in which the experiment had been tried of getting along without the spelling books. Of course, there's no knowing all the circumstances that may have contributed to produce the unsatisfactory work referred to; but it is evident that the restoration of the spelling books had not prevented it. It is difficult to believe that the spelling of those high school pupils would have been any worse if the restoration had not taken place.

This incident suggests the question of how often and to what extent supervisors feel constrained to abandon or deleteriously modify correct methods because some of their teachers can't apply them successfully. Whatever be the answer, the fact does not appear to be established that the spelling book cannot be dispensed with. The pupils of the eighth and ninth grades in this city are provided with abridged dictionaries, as advanced in the article preceding this, and without doubt the time is coming when the provision will be made considerably earlier in the course.

In preceding articles the belief was expressed that the pupils of today write better English, spelling included, than those of former generations, if for no other reason, then because they get much more practice; but whether or not they can "cipher" better is another question. It must be remembered that in the old-time schools as much if not more time was devoted to this exercise than is given to it in the schools of today; and it is alleged that the pupils of today receive more assistance than they should in the solution of problems. At any rate, the complaint is often heard that the average graduate of the grammar school of today cannot perform ordinary computations with reasonable accuracy or rapidity. If this complaint is well founded—and it certainly appears to be—the reason must be that the pupils do not get sufficient drill for the especial purpose of developing speed as well as precision.

But that this is not altogether true with regard to the schools of this city is proved by the fact that once a week a list of examples is sent to the different grades, and the pupils are given a stated time in which to perform them. At the expiration of the time the work must be handed in, whether completed or not. In addition, the pupils are submitted to a speed test on each of the other four days, examples similar to those sent in being given them by the teachers. Considering the character of the examples and the time allowed for their performance, these tests do not appear to be at all severe, however. Indeed, they are so easy as to indicate that, upon the average, the pupils are by no means quick in figures.

The writer was present at a recitation in arithmetic by a class in the seventh grade. Five examples not in the text-book had been put upon the black board, and, in addition, the pupils were directed to perform four others in the book. For the working of these nine examples they were given 30 minutes, which was ample time. Nevertheless, only 10 out of a class of nearly 50 succeeded in finishing the task, and not all of these obtained the correct answer in every instance.

The examples were mostly in interest and mensuration. They were neither long nor intricate, and one of them belonged more properly to mental than to written arithmetic. Pupils who understood how to work them—and most of these pupils seemed to understand—ought to have been able to go through them in at least 20 minutes; to have done so in 15 would not have required especially rapid computation. Nevertheless, only a little more than 20 per cent of this class succeeded in getting through them in 30 minutes.

Upon one question, finding the area of the walls and ceiling of a room of given dimensions, about two thirds of the class failed, and the average of incorrect answers appeared to be fully one half. It is scarcely necessary to remark that in actual practice that kind of work wouldn't do at all. Nevertheless, it was no worse than the writer has seen in many schools elsewhere. Indeed, the schools must be exceedingly few and far between in which an entire class can give an exhibition of quick reckoning that would be particularly impressive. The writer is unable to locate a single one of them.

In another school, a class in the fifth grade were taking for the second time one of the speed tests that had been sent in. They all succeeded in finishing the four examples, one under each of the ground rules, in the 15 minutes allowed; and in looking over their work but three individual errors were noted. But the succeeding recitation showed them to be as slow and as inaccurate in their computations as the pupils previously referred to. In the entire class of between 40 and 50, there did not appear to be more than three or four who were reasonably prompt with their answers.

It is evident that facility in the performance of the fundamental operations has very much the same relation to progress in arithmetic as fluency in reading to progress in descriptive geography or history. There appears to be no good reason why a pupil cannot be taught to add a column of figures almost or quite as rapidly as he can read a line of words, and with as few mistakes. The extra time taken to acquire proficiency in this and the other three operations could be more than made up by the time saved later in the course, when it becomes necessary to enter upon a more extended consideration of the whys and wherefores.

As in the case of technical grammar, it is possible that the pupil gets too much theoretical arithmetic before his mind has unfolded sufficiently to profit thereby. To know arithmetic is to know, in the first place, how to perform certain operations, and, in the second place, when to perform them. The learning how is within the ability of very young children; but, to a great extent, the learning when "pre-supposes a mental development that usually does not occur until physical maturity is well in sight.

There are good grounds for suspecting that much of the mathematical reasoning which children appear to perform is in reality little more than the repetition of formulas which they have memorized and learned to adapt to the varying data of different problems. Not infrequently a little close questioning will disclose the fact that a pupil who rattles off an explanation very glibly is far from realizing the full import of what he is saying. To a certain extent he may apprehend, but he dies not fully comprehend, the simple reason being that he is not old enough.

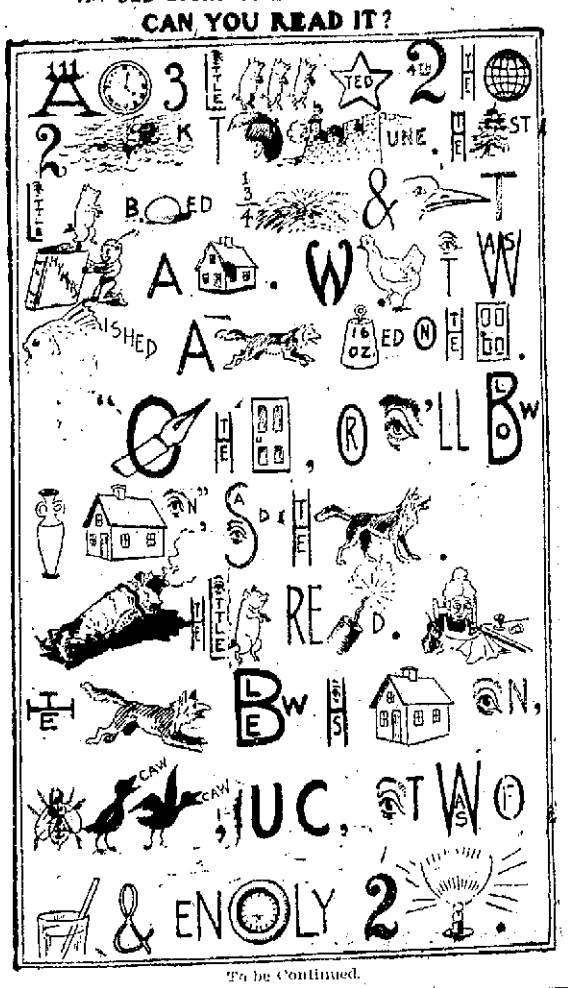

But he may be and probably is at just the right age to learn how to compute rapidly, and consequently that is what he should be learning to do, instead of attempting to learn something that is not yet within his ability. If 15 minutes a day is not enough for the acquisition under consideration, why not trench still further upon the time now devoted to the lower grades to the whys and wherefores? The change might result in the ability to compute without having to stop to think becoming as common as the ability to read without having to stop to spell out the words. The institution of the daily speed test is certainly a step in the right direction. Doubtless the time is coming when its severity can be increased.

WOMEN EMPLOYES ON RUSSIAN RAILWAYS.

The number of women employed on the Russian railways is increasing. According to the latest returns, there are now working on the 25 Russian state railways no fewer than 22,000 women as gatekeepers, clerks, telegraphers, etc. The average wage varies from 130 to 135 rubles yearly ($65 to $70). The extremes are great. Thus, the women clerks receive on an average from 450 to 460 rubles, or about $230, while the women attending at the station are paid only 40 rubles, or about $19.50 a year, in addition to free lodging and a few extras.

A SELF-HELP MOVEMENT.

[William H. Tolman in Century.]

"The great value of my little garden to me has not been the fine vegetables it has yielded and the good time the children have had in the open air, but the glasses of beer and absinthe my husband hasn't taken," observed the mother of a French workingman's rather numerous family to an investigator.

"Quite right, mother," echoed a man near by; "you will never know the evil we men don't do while we are busy in our little gardens."

This conversation took place in France, in one of the workingmen's gardens, a movement for self-help which is growing each year. A similar movement was started in Detroit in 1894 under the name of the Potato Patch Farms; later carried out successfully in New York and other cities in the vacant lot farms, while today Philadelphia is beginning her eighth year of successful effort.

Mme. Hervieu, a charitable woman in Sedan, tired of aiding the poor by gifts of money, attempted to rouse them to self-help by an offer of doubling any sum of money which they should deposit in the local savings bank. She rented a small tract of land and said to the poor people, "Now, go to work."

They did, and as they worked the taste for it grew; they kept steadily at it, especially as they knew that the fruits of their labor would belong to them, that the vegetables they raised could be taken to their homes or sold.

Such was the humble beginning, in 1899, of a little movement, but one so simple and practical that it grew until in Paris there was held a congress of workingmen's gardens, attended by 700 delegates, under the presidency of M. Aynard, of France. The organizer of the congress was M. l'Abbe Lemire, and the secretary, M. Louis Riviere, a collaborator of the American Institute of Social Service.

FOR COMMERCIAL TREATY.

Agreement Reached Between German and American Commissioners.

BERLIN, March 7.—In the Reichstag today Dr. Von Koerner, director of the trade division of the foreign office, said an agreement in opinion had been reached with the American tariff commissioners on the basis for a future commercial treaty, from which it was hoped that a satisfactory outcome from the present situation would be reached. Many misunderstandings had been adjusted, the American commissioners had been convinced of many inconveniences and unfair things in the treatment of German exporters, had so reported to President Roosevelt, and the results of their report may be expected soon.

RUSSIA SUBMITS PROGRAM.

German Government Willing to Consider Each Proposal Seriously.

BERLIN, March 7.—Herr Von Tschirsky, secretary for foreign affairs, informed the appropriations committee of the Reichstag today that Russia had submitted to Germany a long program for the peace conference at The Hague. He added that the German government was willing to consider each proposal seriously, and co-operate with good will in the various details of the conference yet under consideration. The question of the limitation of armaments, the secretary further remarked, was not on the program.

LEGALLY IN THIS COUNTRY.

Immigrants Who Were Landed in South Carolina Last Fall.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—A statement was issued by the Department of Justice concerning an opinion submitted to President Roosevelt by Attorney General Bonaparte as to whether certain immigrants who were landed in South Carolina last fall are legally in this country. The opinion, in effect, is that the immigrants were entitled to admission to the United States, and that they are in this country legally. This opinion agrees with that rendered on the same case by Solicitor Earle, of the Department of Commerce and Labor.

The Attorney General holds further, however, that under the provisions of the recently enacted immigration act the immigrants in question could have been excluded.

THE MODERN "PITTSBURGH PERFECT" WIRE FENCE, WELDED BY ELECTRICITY.

What a Marvel it would have been to Abraham Lincoln, splitter of rails.

Mr. Farmer: Your progressiveness is keeping you in close touch with improvements in farm machinery, in dairy methods, and with all the scientific facts that bring about the greatest possible agricultural production.

You are also informing yourself about fence. We know you are.

First—there was the stone fence of medieval history.
Second—pioneer America converted its timber into rails.
Third—somebody found a way to weave wire and slats.
Fourth—along came barb wire, with its marvelous sale.
Fifth—machines were invented to twist or clamp one wire around another: the woven wire fence.

But, most important of all, electricity now welds the wires at the joint, making no longer necessary these wraps and clamps. Stay and strand, wizard-like, become one.

The greatest step forward in fence building is thus accomplished at a single, master stroke.

Of course, you are not using anything else. Surely you are familiarizing yourself with this remarkable improvement, to be found only in "Pittsburgh Perfect."

ARCHIE ROOSEVELT SLIGHTLY BETTER.

Has Good Night and Condition Encouraging.

President Transacts Business at Usual Hour.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Following the alarming symptoms of yesterday there was an apparent change for the better in the condition of Archie Roosevelt, the President's son, today. The impression resulting from weak heart action yesterday has disappeared, and the physicians report the boy's condition as most gratifying. The President told his callers today that Archie was bright and cheerful, and that he was very hopeful of a successful fight against the disease. Archie is the least robust of all the President's boys, but the attending physicians say this does not necessarily militate against his recovery.

In his visit to the sick room the President observes the same precautions against infection that are taken by the physicians, donning a gown similar to those worn by them, and washing his hands in a solution of carbolic acid when he leaves the apartment.

The regular cabinet meeting was held today and the President transacted business at the executive offices as usual.

Despite the fact that the President did not retire until 2 o'clock this morning, he arose shortly after 6 o'clock, and at once communicated with Dr. Kennedy, who had relieved Dr. Lambert at the sick boy's bedside. Mrs. Roosevelt spent almost the entire night in Archie's room. Mrs. Nicholas Longworth telephoned to the White House before breakfast to inquire as to her brother's condition. The greatest anxiety is felt by the doctors over the weak heart condition of the patient, and Dr. Lambert is administering heart stimulants to prevent another sinking spell today.

Secretary Loeb issued the following statement at 9 o'clock this morning:

"The physicians' report this morning is that Archie Roosevelt had a good night and his condition is most gratifying. The President has been with the patient frequently, exercising the same precaution as the physicians as to infection."

At 1:30 o'clock Dr. Lambert who came from New York at the President's request, said Archie is doing very well, is perfectly conscious, and expressed the opinion that he will get through all right. Dr. Lambert will remain here as long as the President desires his presence at the sickbed.

GOOD PENS AND BAD WRITING.

[London Globe.]

The boys of the present day ought to write a better hand than their predecessors; but it is not in accord with general experience that they do so. Those whose painful duty it is to engage and supervise junior clerks tell us that when they were lads they would have been ashamed to turn out such work as now daily meets their eyes, and it is even whispered that there is a mysterious connection between badly made pens and incorrect spelling.

Now, it is incontestable that pens are much better made mechanically than in the days when schoolmasters, or boys, used to be taught to fashion goose quills into writing implements for themselves. We have steel pens of every degree of hardness, to say nothing of stylos and fountain pens. Good writing, by which is meant writing that anybody can read at a glance, ought to be a universal accomplishment. Why is it not? Obviously because it is undervalued. Boys are not taught to esteem highly the power to make their meaning plain. And it is not boys only that are to blame. Half our "educated" people are content to inflict an almost unconquerable task upon everybody who tries to read their letters whenever they put pen to paper.

The fact is that illegible writing is a moral offence, and if that were generally recognized life would go much more easily than it does. The sins that would be saved in bad temper, and perhaps now and then in bad language, when people open their letters, are innumerable.

FOR EMBARKATION OF TROOPS.

[Tribune Washington correspondence.]

The system of embarking troops at Newport News on the occasion of sending them to Cuba has been set forth in printed form for the benefit of army quartermasters generally who may have occasion hereafter to supervise such a movement.

The work accomplished by Major Thomas H. Shavens, one of the quartermasters on duty in the War Department who was sent to Newport News, has been highly endorsed. There was no delay in getting troops from trains to the transports, and the same expedition was shown in placing supplies on board the vessels. The movement was facilitated by the fact that there was perfect co-operation between the authorities in Washington and the army quartermaster at Newport News, and the affair was noticeable for lack of useless formality. The system which was used will be adopted as an approved method of embarking troops when they must be transported in an emergency.

STOCK MARKET DEMORALIZED.

Most Sensational Movement in Missouri Pacific.

NEW YORK, March 8.—The stock market was thrown into a demoralized condition during the first hour of the trading today by renewal of the drastic liquidation. All quarters of the list were affected and stocks seemed to come from all available sources, with no demand sufficient to check the downward plunge in prices. The weak closing yesterday had served to depress speculative sentiment. Discouraged holders of stock on margin sent in orders on a large scale to throw over holdings and accept losses. Commission houses also closed out accounts on a large scale where insufficient responses had been made to calls for additional margin.

The most sensational movement was in Missouri Pacific, which slumped 5¾, owing to doubts over the maintenance of the dividend. Union Pacific was sold in enormous volume, in spite of the deduction of the five per cent dividend from the price, and added 2⅜ to that amount of the decline from yesterday's closing. The United States Steel stocks were under severe pressure, the common breaking through 40 and the preferred receding to within a shade of par. Delaware & Hudson dropped 7, Consolidated Gas 3, Chesapeake & Ohio 2¾, Reading 2½, and many other active stocks between 1 and 2 points. The only sign of support was in some of yesterday's weakest stocks, Louisville & Nashville, the Southern Railway stocks and Erie showed some resistance to the general weakness. The spasm of liquidation had subsided before the first hour expired and the market became much quieter at some recovery from the low level.

AN INTERESTING MEETING.

Pupils of Calvert Division Take Up the Subject of the Newport Fire Department.

Calvert division, Newport League of Good Citizenship, held its most interesting meeting of the season yesterday afternoon. President Green presided and asked the following questions, which were distributed several days ago among the various members of the league: How long has Newport had a fire department? What is known of colonial measures in case of fire? How many stations, engines and horses has the Newport Fire Department? How many fire alarm boxes and hydrants has Newport? How much does Newport spend every year for this department? Why has not Middletown a fire department? What are the following persons noted for: Bishop Berkeley, Colonel Waring, Julia Ward Howe, Channing, Edwin Booth, Helen Hunt Jackson, Oliver Hazard Perry, Matthew Perry, John LaFarge?

A short account of the Hand in Hand Fire Club of Newport—organized in 1749—was read and some autograph letters of Edwin Booth written from Leipsic in 1883 to Dr. Watson of Newport, were shown with some of his pictures. Mrs. Frank M. Greenlaw, who had charge of the work in Calvert, added a few words of information as the various words of information as the various questions were answered. The division voted to have the subject of the next meeting "The Police Department." At Cranston School Tuesday next, Mrs. Greenlaw in charge, the same questions will be answered as were answered at Calvert yesterday.

MIDDLETOWN.

Business of the Fourth Quarterly Conference of the Methodist Church.

[Regular correspondence of the News.]

The fourth Quarterly Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church met at the parsonage last evening. In the absence of the presiding elder, Rev. A. J. Coultas, D. D., who was unable to attend because of other duties, Rev. C. A. Stenhouse of the First Church, Newport, had been duly deputized and presided at the meeting. The meeting opened with prayer by Rev. Mr. Stenhouse and Charles Peckham was elected secretary. Reports were made, covering the various departments of the church work, and officers were elected, as follows:

Trustees—Charles H. Ward, Arthur W. Chase, Charles Peckham, Millard F. Smith, Abram A. Brown, Ashton C. Barker, James T. Peckham, Alden P. Barker, James H. Barker.

Stewards—Christopher S. Peckham, Mrs. Abram A. Brown, A. Herbert Ward, William L. Brown, Charles Peckham, William J. Peckham, Alden P. Barker, Mrs. Lydia B. Chase, Miss Ellen E. Smith, C. Henry Congdon, William Smith, Mrs. Ida M. Brown, Mrs. Arthur W. Chase.

Recording Steward—Alden P. Barker.

District Steward—A. Herbert Ward.

By a unanimous vote the presiding elder was requested to secure Rev. H. H. Critchlow as pastor of the church for a second year.

The subject of the new church was introduced and it was voted to build a new church on the present site. The subscription committee was continued with two additions, and was authorized to incur such expenses as may be needed to secure plans and specifications for a new building. The subscription committee includes Rev. H. H. Critchlow, Mrs. Lydia B. Chase and Charles H. Ward, with Ashton C. Barker and A. Herbert Ward added. The sum of $4,800 has been pledged, and the new church seems likely to be a fact in the near future.

Rev. Mr. Critchlow suggested a jubilee celebration during the summer, in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of the church, which was organized as a Methodist church in the spring or summer of 1857. The first pastor was Rev. Mr. Merrill. Only a few of the original members are still living, with a number of the first year's probationers. Rev. Mr. Critchlow, A. Herbert Ward and Mrs. Lydia B. Chase were appointed a committee to make plans for this celebration.

Mr. and Mrs. George Irish are not ill, but their son has been ill, being threatened with pneumonia. Mr. and Mrs. William J. Irish are both ill.

The Souza children, who have been ill with diphtheria, are all convalescing. The third child is doing as well as possible.

Mrs. C. Henry Congdon is ill, being confined to bed. Mrs. W. Scott Barker is suffering from an injury sustained by a fall on the ice some time ago.

A large social meeting was held at the Methodist Church last night, between 50 and 60 being present.

Mrs. Henry M. Wilson returned last night from a month's visit to her sons, Henry M. Wilson, Jr., in Flatbush, N. Y., and Herbert Wilson, at East Orange, N. J. Mr. Henry M. Wilson, Sr., has been spending two weeks with his wife and returned with her.

Mrs. William Hubbell will entertain the East Side Dramatic Club this evening at the home of her mother, Mrs. E. Marion Peckham, on Prospect avenue.

JAMESTOWN EXPOSITION STAMPS

Postmaster General Cortelyou has approved the design for a one-cent postage stamp which is to be of the series of stamps commemorative of the Jamestown Exposition. The denominations of the stamp will be one-cent and two-cent. The design for the latter was approved by the Postmaster General several days ago. The stamp will be rectangular in form, the one-cent stamp being green in color and the two-cent carmine. The one-cent stamp will bear a vignette of Captain John Smith and the dates of his birth and death, 1580-1631, in the upper left-hand corner will be a profile of Pocahontas and in the upper right-hand corner a profile of Powhattan.

The two-cent stamp will bear a fine engraving of the landing of the first settlers at Jamestown. The stamps are being made at the bureau of engraving and printing and will be placed on sale at postoffices throughout the United States April 26, the day of the opening of the Jamestown Exposition.

GUEST NIGHT APPRECIATED.

Large Audience to Hear University Extension Lecture.

Professor W. Hudson Shaw Has for His Topic "Siena"—Its History Art and Literature.

Guest night at the Rogers High School last evening was evidently appreciated, an audience which filled the hall being present to hear Professor W. Hudson Shaw lecture on "Siena" in the University Extension course. It was only in 1902 that a complete history of "Siena" in any language was written by reason of the fact that it has been overshadowed by Florence. From Dante to Ruskin the praises of Florence have been sung, while Siena has suffered undeserved neglect. Siena, with its lack of modern improvements, is a typical mediaeval city, and in some respects is more attractive than Florence. The republics of Florence and of Siena have their individual characters, the Sienese being characterized by passion and intensity and the Florentine by soberness and intellectuality.

Siena was undoubtedly Etruscan in origin and was a Roman colony in the days of Augustus. It was one of the later Italian cities and is located on rolling plains in the heart of Tuscany, 30 miles south of Florence and 150 miles southwest of Rome, in the thirteenth century Siena was a business town, and was always a rival and bitter enemy of Florence. At the battle of Montaperti Florence was utterly defeated by the Ghibellines from Siena, the Florentines being outfought and outgeneralled. Economically, however, the victory did Siena no good, as the Papacy withdrew its banking business and Florence again became supreme.

Professor Shaw next considered the beginnings of Italian art, which have been attributed to Cimabue of Florence instead of to Ducio of Siena, who holds the place of honor. In 1311 Siena was the greatest art centre in Europe, the cathedral of Siena being in building at this time and being completed before the end of the fourteenth century. This cathedral resembles the people who built it, not being quite sane, as Professor Shaw expressed it. It shows, however, why the Sienese gained fame, because in its every appointment high aspiration is manifested. The Black Death which swept over Europe in 1357 worked the end of Sienese greatness and the new cathedral begun in 1340 was abandoned in 1357, and stands today as a pathetic reminder of past grandeur.

The wonderful career of Catherine of Siena of the third order of St. Dominic was then taken up and extracts from her letters were read. San Bernandino and Pope Pius II of Siena were mentioned, and the death tragedy of the republic in 1565 was taken up in detail. After a siege of a year and three months April 21, 1555, the Republic of Siena surrendered to Charles V. Of the 10,000 inhabitants before the siege only 8,000 were left at its close, famine having claimed all the rest. Siena has been no failure in her history, and she remains the most lovable of all the cities of Tuscany. At the conclusion of the interesting lecture several views of Siena and Pisa were shown.

Before the audience dispersed Professor Shaw spoke of the aim of the University Extension system and of the interest Newport has shown in the work. Mr. Frank M. Greenlaw then suggested that a centre be organized here on a business basis. The suggestion was adopted and plans for the organization will soon be perfected. In this way the courses of lectures to be given in the future will be assured financial support. Membership in the centre will entitle one to a voice in the choice of lecturers and a course ticket.

"THE YANKEE CONSUL."

The locale of the comic opera, "The Yankee Consul," is in Santo Domingo, the tropical atmosphere giving the scenic artist, costume designer and composer opportunities rarely offered in such a production. The book and lyrics are by Henry M. Blossom, Jr., who wrote "Checkers," and the music is by Alfred G. Robyn, one of the foremost composers in America. Mr. Robyn wrote the Manzanillo Dance and the songs, "Answer" and "You." He excels in composing dainty airs of the Spanish style. Some of the best numbers in "The Yankee Consul" are "The Mosquito and the Midge," "Yo-ho," "In The Days of Old," and "My San Domingo Maid." The opera will be seen here April 8, for Miss McGowan's benefit.

FOUR FUNERALS.

There was quite a gathering of friends and acquaintances at 7 Malbone avenue yesterday afternoon, when Rev. Dr. Porter of Emmanuel Church conducted funeral services for Mrs. Caroline E. Ball, widow of Dr. George C. Ball. The deceased came here some years ago with her son, Charles H. Ball, who for years accompanied his mother in walks about town, covering apparently all section of the city, so that the two became almost as well known as one's next-door neighbor. The devotion of the son to the mother attracted attention from all, and the citizens felt that though they did not personally know the Balls they were their friends through sympathy. The son died July 4, 1905, and since then but little has been seen of Mrs. Ball, on whom old age had laid its hands, finally calling her home in her eighty ninth year.

She had but one living relative, a nephew, who was here for the funeral. The body was taken to New York last night by Undertaker Marsh, accompanied by Mr. T. J. Gibson, for years a neighbor, and the interment was this morning in the Eagle vault in the old cemetery in Second street in that city.

The funeral of Mrs. Alexander J. Maclver was held from her late residence on Summer street this afternoon and was largely attended. The service was conducted by Rev. Dr. Webb of the First Presbyterian Church, who said he could best speak of her Christian virtues by reading passages of Scripture. He also read a number of selections from hymns. The interment was private. The floral tributes were many.

The funeral of Daniel Walsh took place this morning from the residence of his son on West Marlborough street to St. Joseph's Church, where a solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated by the pastor, Father Mahon, assisted by Rev. Dr. Doran as deacon and Father Smith as sub-deacon. The interment was at St. Columba cemetery. The bearers were Edwin J. Southgate, Randall A. McCarroll, Michael E. Fitzgerald and Timothy J. Canning, the last-named of Jamaica Plain. There were a number of handsome floral tributes.

The body of the late John Betz, who died in North Attleboro, where funeral services were held today, arrived this afternoon on the three o'clock train for burial here. The deceased formerly resided here, where he carried on the tailoring business, removing about 15 years ago. He leaves two daughters living here, Mrs. Fred W. Lawton and Mrs. George Parrott.

THE CITY TELEPHONES.

Inquiry as to Prices and the Service Rendered.

Manager Wright Answers Questions and Requested to Furnish Rates Elsewhere.

The Board of Aldermen held another meeting, the third this week, Thursday evening, to look over the weekly pay rolls and do such other business as might come up. Manager Wright of the Telephone Exchange was present and there was considerable talk about the prices of telephones, what the city is paying for and what it might do in the future. There was a communication from that old source of communications, the Congregation Shearath Israel and L. Napoleon Levy of New York, in regard to the Jews' Synagogue and the funds in charge of the city. The letter was received without being read. It was read privately by members of the board and then filed away, it being the opinion that neither Rabbi Mendez, who sent the letter, nor the supposed writer, L. Napoleon Levy, nor the Congregation of New York, had anything to say officially in regard to the matter. Mayor Clarke presided and Aldermen Kingman, Shepley and Coltrell were present, with City Solicitor Burdick.

The city solicitor presented a draft of a proposed contract with the Newport Hospital, which was received but was not taken up at the meeting.

The communication from L. Napoleon Levy was received.

A petition from Darling & Slade, for permission to fence in a part of the sidewalk at the postoffice, while the work of building an addition is in progress, was refered to the street commissioner.

Pay rolls were examined and approved as follows: Highway department, $425.67; police, $729.14; fire department, $435.77; other employes who are paid weekly, $168.19.

The city clerk called attention to the position taken by the city treasurer, that he is to buy no more stamps. The mayor and members of the board stamped that as a wrong position, as the board had not taken any action against the purchase of stamps; all it had done was to provide for the purchase of government stamped and printed envelopes when needed. Where officials have printed envelopes they are supposed to use them and secure stamps for mailing, just as formerly.

The city solicitor returned the petition of the Second Baptist Church, for permission to sell the parsonage on Farewell street, and with it a resolution which was passed, giving the consent of the city to the sale of the parsonage, with the proviso that the money shall be kept separate and so invested as to protect the rights of the city, as well as though the parsonage existed.

The old contract with the Providence Telephone Company, prepared by a former City Council and designed to take effect July 1, 1905, was submitted by the city solicitor, who said it was a plain, straight contract, and very simple. It is now out of date, and if a contract is made it will be necessary to draw a new one. The contract was read. It provides just what telephones the city will pay for and what the price is to be. It does not provide for the school telephones, that being covered by the School Committee.

After the contract had been read many questions were asked Manager Wright. It was suggested that the schools come into a central system, similar to that of the police and fire departments. Against this, it was said that the plan would make it impossible to communicate with any one outside the schools. It is desirable to have the schools on the Exchange, so that the truant officer may communicate with teachers from all over the city. Still, the city owns a duct in the wire conduits all over town, and could run its own wires if it saw fit and establish a central exchange for the schools or the City Hall.

Mayor Clarke asked what telephones are paid for by the city for the police, and was told that there are 18 police boxes, one telephone with extension in the police station, and at the homes of Chief Crowley, Captain Garnett, Sergeants Griffith and Gillen, Commissioners Congeshall, Horton and Wetherell. The last three are the $48 style, for which the city pays $24; those at the sergeants' homes are the $25 style, for which the city pays $12.50. The rate is half the commercial rate.

For the schools there are 15 in schoolhouses, one at the superintendent's office and one at his house, three at teachers' houses which are private, and the tenant officer pays for his telephone. The school telephones cost $24 each, half the regular rate. They are considered business places.

Mayor Clarke suggested that schools are open but five hours a day, and but five days a week, and there are two months' vacation in a year. Manager Wright saw no reason why there should be a private telephone charge and why all should not be "official," and the Providence Telephone Company did not either. This matter was more fully explained to the board later, when the city clerk informed the members that there was an understanding that officials of the city could have telephones at half price on making application therefor. The Telephone company wanted all such telephones charged to and paid for by the city, the city to collect from the officers, so that there should be but one charge by the company. This is not now done. Mayor Clarke suggested that all members of the Representative Council could come under the half-rate arrangement, but the city clerk did not think so. There was no argument over this, however.

Mr. Coltrell asked Manager Wright what it would cost to install a central office, and was told that it was a matter of the cost of material and running the wires.

There had been some interruptions of the talk with Manager Wright by an outsider, and Mayor Clarke informed him that he would be given an opportunity to speak on the matter at the proper time, but that this meeting was for the purpose of talking with Manager Wright.

Manager Wright was asked about the rates in Portsmouth, Jamestown and elsewhere. He said the rates in Pawtucket are the same as in Newport; he thought there is no exclusive franchise in Pawtucket. He did not know the rates in the other cities, though had he known that the board wished to know he could have brought the rates from the office.

After more talk a resolution was passed requesting Manager Wright to submit the rates charged for commercial telephones and to the city or town for city business in the various places in Rhode Island where the Providence Telephone Company is doing business; also, that he communicate with the officials of the Providence Telephone Company in regard to the making of a "material reduction" in the cost of the city telephone service, in accordance with the vote of the Representative Council. There was a proviso in the resolution calling for the placing under ground of the telephone wires on Thames street, Broadway and Bellevue avenue. Manager Wright said the company has no poles or overhead wires on any of those streets.

A communication was received from C. Brooks Johnson, chairman of the board of governors of the Jamestown Exposition, inviting the city of Newport to name a day for observance as Newport day at the exposition.

After considerable talk on various matters the board at 9:30 adjourned.

MUST CURB THEIR PROFANITY.

Profanity by wire must cease is the dictum of the Commercial Telegraphers Union of America. The union has decided that members who have been in the habit of clicking naughty words over the wire because their instrument is working poorly or the office is cold, or they are feeling out of sorts generally, will have to keep their fingers off the keys until the "cussing" period has passed. The telegraphers even had adopted code signals for curses.

THE TRUTHFUL LYRE.

[Kansas City Journal.]

It may sound paradoxical to say that The Louisville Lyre tells the truth, but no Kansas editor will doubt the genuineness of the following: "As only one of the proprietors is at home this week we apologize for all mistakes made and say they were inexcusable, as all an editor has to do is to hunt news and clean the rollers and set type, sweep the floor and write short items and fold papers, and talk to visitors and write wrappers and make the paste and mail the papers and carry and saw wood and read the proof, hunt the shears and dodge the bills and be joshed by the whole town."

STRUCK BY STAGING.

William B. Kinney, a Former Resident of This City, In a Serious Condition As Result of Accident.

William B. Kinney, formerly of this city, a son of Mr. Jonathan Kinney, is in a serious condition at his home in Providence as the result of being struck by a staging at a new building at Greystone, Tuesday night. Mr. Kinney is employd by the Bishop Construction Company as a night watchman. He was starting to work Tuesday evening when he met with the accident. The day laborers were departing and Kinney walked beneath the big staging. Suddenly the staging fell and bore him to the ground beneath its weight. He was knocked unconscious and was taken to his home in a comatose condition.

A physicun was called to attend him and he found the man in a serious condition. The victim is suffering from a long gash on the top of the head, severe bruises on the right leg and one of his fingers is badly torn. Wednesday morning, after he regained consciousness, he became speechless. Yesterday he was much better and was able to articulate, and it is believed that with a week's rest he will be comparatively well. He narrowly escaped concussion of the brain.

Mr. Kinney is a member of Coronet Council, Royal Arcanum, and Weenat Shassitt Tribe of Red Men of this city, and the officials of those organizations are watching the case, through Providence representatives. Mr. Jonathan Kinney went to Providence yesterday to join his wife, who has been visiting her son for some time.

GEM

Incandescent Lamp Units

Are the most economical for store and shop lighting. They will give twice the useful light of an ordinary incandescent lamp with the same consumption of current. This is due to the design of the Holophane Pagoda shades, which are designated to be used with this Special Lamp, and to the lamp itself, the lamp consuming but 2.5 watts per candle power.

We will be pleased to furnish GEM UNITS on trial to all customers.

The complete unit is inexpensive in cost and operation.
